

Canadian Trade Patterns

- Most years, the Canadian economy generates a favourable balance of merchandise trade
- However, Canada's non-merchandise trade typically generates a negative balance
 - Driven by interest and dividend payments made to foreign investors, this deficit has been increasing steadily in recent years
 - The Canadian economy is extremely dependent on foreign capital to support domestic industrial activity and to carry the large public/government debt
 - In 2000, export of travel, transportation, commercial, government, and financial service totaled $58 billion while imports of these services totaled $64 billion

Trading on Their Terms? Commodity Exporters in the Aftermath of the Commodity Boom Aqib Aslam, Samya Beidas-Strom, Mr. Rudolfs Bems, Oya Celasun, Sinem Kiliç Çelik, Zsoka Koczan, 2016-02-15 Commodity prices have declined sharply over the past three years and output growth has slowed considerably among countries that are net exporters of commodities A critical question for policy makers in these economies is whether commodity windfalls influence potential output Our analysis suggests that both actual and potential output move together with commodity terms of trade but that actual output comoves twice as strongly as potential output The weak commodity price outlook is estimated to subtract 1 to 21 4 percentage points from actual output growth annually on average during 2015 17 The forecast drag on potential output is about one third of that for actual output

The Spillover Effects of a Downturn in China's Real Estate Investment Mr. Ashvin Ahuja, Mr. Alla Myrvoda, 2012-11-05 Real estate investment accounts for a quarter of total fixed asset investment FAI in China The real estate sector's extensive industrial and financial linkages make it a special type of economic activity especially where the credit creation process relies primarily on collateral like in China As a result the impact on economic activity of a collapse in real estate investment in China though a low probability event would be sizable with large spillovers to a number of China's trading partners Using a two region factor augmented vector autoregression model that allows for interaction between China and the rest of the G20 economies we find that a 1 percent decline in China's real estate investment would shave about 0 1 percent off China's real GDP within the first year with negative spillover impacts to China's G20 trading partners that would cause global output to decline by roughly 0 05 percent from baseline Japan Korea and Germany would be among the hardest hit In that event commodity prices especially metal prices could fall by as much as 0 8 2 2 percent below baseline one year after the shock

Investment Incentives in Commonwealth Developed Countries and the WTO Investment Negotiations Michael Davenport, 2003 While there is broad consensus on the need for developing countries to attract foreign investment to enhance their growth performance a number of countries are anxious to maintain restrictions to overall liberalisation This title will be specific relevance to trade investment decision makers in the public policy field

Canada International Monetary Fund. Western Hemisphere Dept., 2014-02-03 This 2013 Article IV Consultation highlights that the Canadian economy strengthened in 2013 after a subdued performance in 2012 but the underlying growth has remained modest Despite the depreciating exchange rate non energy exports remained well below the levels reached after earlier recessions The housing market has cooled owing in part to macro prudential measures adopted in the past Economic growth is expected to accelerate to 21 4 percent in 2014 up from an estimated 13 4 percent in 2013 Canada's export growth should benefit from the projected pick up in U S growth in 2014 boosting business investment

Diagnostics for Tuberculosis, 2006. Every year there are 8.8 million new active cases and nearly two million deaths worldwide from tuberculosis, about 5,000 every day, mostly in the poorest communities of the developing world. One third of the world's population has latent TB, which may later develop into an active form of the disease, and it has also become the leading cause of death among people with HIV. Multidrug resistance is also a growing problem. A key challenge for the public health community is to be able to effectively diagnose patients so that valuable resources and medicines are not wasted on misdiagnosis and repeat treatments. This report, written by an international network of researchers and policy experts, examines the global market for TB diagnostics, available for active disease, latent infection, drug resistance and treatment response. It provides a sound basis for diagnostics development suitable for various levels of health systems in industrialised and developing countries.
