- ▶ Resources = wealth
- ▶ Wealth = power (military power)
- ▶ Military power = more land... and the cycle repeats itself; giving rise to imperialism through the build-up of military power (militarism)
- ▶ In order to compete in this imperial game you have to have bigger, better weapons than your competitor empires = arms race

Arms Races:

Arms Races in International Politics Thomas G. Mahnken, Joseph Maiolo, David Stevenson, 2016 This volume provides the first comprehensive history of the arms racing phenomenon in modern international politics drawing both on theoretical approaches and on the latest historical research Written by an international team of specialists it is divided into four sections before 1914 the inter war years the Cold War and extra European and post Cold War arms races Twelve case studies examine land and naval armaments before the First World War air land and naval competition during the 1920s and 1930s and nuclear as well as conventional weapons since 1945 Armaments policies are placed within the context of technological development international politics and diplomacy and social politics and economics An extended general introduction and conclusion and introductions to each section provide coherence between the specialized chapters and draw out wider implications for policymakers and for political scientists Arms Races in International Politics addresses two key questions what causes arms races and what is the connection between arms races and the outbreak of wars Arms Races, Arms Control, and Conflict Analysis Walter Isard, 1989-02-24 Demonstrating the ways in which work in a broad range of fields can be pulled together in the analysis of conflict this book provides the reader with a general introduction to the principles of conflict analysis and lays a methodological foundation for the further development of the interdisciplinary field of peace science The text begins with an extensive survey of arms race models from the classic Richardson model to models exploring the effects of factors such as the domestic and international economic environment public opinion and party politics and weapons technology and information development The processes of individual and group problem solving in both crisis and non crisis conditions are examined drawing on work in economics operations research cognitive science and artificial intelligence Building on this diverse body of work the author moves on to develop a framework for conflict management with which to approach a variety of conflict situations and applies this procedure to the United States Soviet arms control conflict Walter Isard is cited by Mark Blaug as one of the Great Economists Since Keynes CUP 1989 paper edition Arms Races Nils Petter Gleditsch, Olav Njølstad, 1990-02 A long tradition of theoretical and empirical work has been devoted to the question of the driving forces in the arms race since the 1960s This book takes up the internal factors of arms dynamics such as bureaucratic politics interservice rivalry and the military industrial complex as well as external factors such as interactive arms dynamics between the two superpowers It also deals with the question of technological determinism the ideas that what is technically possible will be done as opposed to the idea that politics is in command Finally factors in the international system affecting arms races are also examined such as long economic waves and power transitions The Arms Race Anita Croy, 2019-07-15 Arms races are often associated with the Cold War but they re still a reality around the world today Issues such as military aggression and nuclear weapons are complex but they re presented to readers in an accessible way A fact filled main text engaging full color photographs and helpful graphic organizers richly present details about the arms race

Readers are challenged to think for themselves about international arms races as they explore discussion questions and are asked to compare and contrast the viewpoints of experts Although news stories about weapons and wars might seem frightening to young people this volume stresses the importance of facts over fearmongering Do Arms Races Exist?

Charles H. Fairbanks (Jr),1985 Tacit Bargaining, Arms Races, and Arms Control George W. Downs,David M.

Rocke,2025-10-01 When most people including social scientists reflect on the ways that nations resolve their differences they tend to think in terms of polar alternatives war versus negotiation This perspective ignores a third path tacit bargaining which is applicable as this book shows to a wide variety of international issues and is especially germane to the problem of treaty maintenance Arms Race Theory Craig Etcheson,1989-07-12 For most of the twentieth century social scientists have attempted to understand the causes of military competition From this struggle has evolved the Richardson Tradition of Arms Race Analysis a distinct body of scientific literature that uses a variety of mathematical techniques and theoretical ideas to solve the puzzle of what drives military interaction among nations Etcheson explores this intellectual journey and projects the paths along which the Richardson Tradition must go if it is to obtain its objective understanding and control of potentially unnecessary organized social violence Arms Race Theory examines thoroughly the literature of the Richardson Tradition from the writings of Lewis Fry Richardson through the most recent attempts of his students to resolve the fundamental questions about interaction in arms races Etcheson documents the application of the procedures of positive physical science to social problems and identifies the reasons why Richardson and his students have been frustrated in their efforts According to the author students of the Richardson Tradition adhere to an atomistic and reductionist perspective that denies the relevance of human values and intentions He focuses on the idea of strategy as a gateway to an understanding of the social causes of arms accumulation Etcheson prepares the way for a new phase in the Richardson Tradition by identifying new theoretical foci and methodological techniques His analysis coupled with the most comprehensive bibliography of the literature of the Richardson Tradition currently available is a significant contribution to the growing body of scholarship in peace research and international relations theory The Dynamics of the Arms Race David Carlton,Carlo

Schaerf,2020-12-01 The nuclear arms race had dominated international politics for the two decades prior to publication Originally published in 1975 this symposium examines the dynamics of change within the arms race and the attempts at controlling and limiting it At the time the nuclear arms race was strongly technologically determined as Herbert York demonstrates in discussing the impact of MIRV Such progress as has been made in nuclear disarmament has been far outdistanced by the technological developments so that as Jack Ruina argues SALT is only important when seen as part of a process of negotiating arms limitations The most significant result of this technological advance has been the emergence of a qualitatively new system of international politics which Hans Morgenthau analyses This system is essentially bipolar in nuclear terms and the history of the disarmament negotiations as reviewed by William Epstein is an exercise in freezing this structure The negotiations themselves particularly SALT and the prospects for further progress are discussed extensively by Thomas Schelling Kosta Tsipis George Rathjens and others The book also surveys developments in chemical and biological warfare and includes an important paper on chemical warfare agents by the Soviet chemist O A Ruetov The final section looks at recent developments in the theory of conflict and its applications in the Middle East South Africa and a number of developing countries

The Arms Race in Asia Andrew T.H. Tan,2013-12-13 This book is the first systematic examination of the emerging arms race in Asia The global trade in arms is to a large degree underpinned by the strong demand for arms in Asia and the Middle East the two largest arms export markets in the world Of these two regions Asia has become particularly significant led by the emergence of China and India as major powers It is therefore not surprising that the rapid military modernisation in Asia accompanied by significant increases in the size and sophistication of armed forces has generated attention as to its trends key characteristics causes and implications This phenomenon which has become evident since the end of the Cold War has also been widely described as an Asian arms race This book evaluates the key conceptual ideas which can shed light on this phenomenon as well as examining the complex mix of internal external and technological factors that have led to its emergence The volume explores the way in which the arms race is leading ultimately to three distinctive blocs in the emerging geostrategic landscape a loose bloc of US allies in the region a counter bloc of potential US adversaries and a neutral bloc of states with industrial age armed forces whose allegiances will vary according to circumstances and geostrategic developments The Arms Race in Asia concludes that if the emerging arms race is left unchecked it is likely that Asia will increasingly become a region of instability marked by conflicts and interstate wars The book will be of great interest to students of Asian politics strategic studies defence studies security studies and IR in general

Secrecy and the Arms Race Martin C. McGuire,1965 Martin McGuire has written for the specialist and the concerned layman a highly original and valuable contribution to our understanding of the arms race based upon economic theory in general and the theory of economic duopoly in particular He calls attention to the fact that when two world powers face each other with massive allocations of resources for arms and when each regards the other as the major if not the sole threat to its own security the question of accurate information about the strength and intentions of the adversary arises for each side in many and various ways As a result this study is a pioneering analytic effort to approach the value of keeping secrets from or of obtaining information about an enemy The author is concerned with such questions as what is the loss in being only 50 percent confident rather than certain that the adversary doesn't have more X missiles or missiles of yield W megatons or of accuracy C thousand feet Should one insist on being 95 percent sure when bargaining for arms control How can a side compensate for its uncertainty most efficiently An understanding of these problems can not only increase our security it may help as well to contain or control the entire two sided race the Middle East region has been confronted with challenging security issues Combined with a lack of an efficient regional security regime this has led to the formation of a full fledged arms race This book draws together contributions from international experts to address the factors that have been contributing to the ongoing formation of an arms race in the Middle East as well as the impact of this phenomenon on the regional and global security environment The book is organized in three sections The first section outlines the contemporary dynamics of the arms race in the Middle East by focusing on its most recent dynamics and their implications for regional and international security The second section conducts systematic analysis of case studies of country specific drivers of the arms race The third and final section examines the role of external actors in the arms race evaluating both the responses of regional actors to external interventions as well as the implications of the arms race for extra regional countries

Rational Theory of International Politics Charles L. Glaser, 2010-04-26

Within the realist school of international relations a prevailing view holds that the anarchic structure of the international system invariably forces the great powers to seek security at one another's expense dooming even peaceful nations to an unrelenting struggle for power and dominance Rational Theory of International Politics offers a more nuanced alternative to this view one that provides answers to the most fundamental and pressing questions of international relations Why do states sometimes compete and wage war while at other times they cooperate and pursue peace Does competition reflect pressures generated by the anarchic international system or rather states own expansionist goals Are the United States and China on a collision course to war or is continued coexistence possible Is peace in the Middle East even feasible Charles Glaser puts forward a major new theory of international politics that identifies three kinds of variables that influence a state's strategy the state's motives specifically whether it is motivated by security concerns or greed material variables which determine its military capabilities and information variables most importantly what the state knows about its adversary's motives Rational Theory of International Politics demonstrates that variation in motives can be key to the choice of strategy that the international environment sometimes favors cooperation over competition and that information variables can be as important as material variables in determining the strategy a state should choose
