Movement and Action in Learning and Development Ida Stockman, 2004-03-24 This book presents theories and clinical practices for dealing with children diagnosed with pervasive developmental disability or PDD These are children who have a wide range of disabilities that affect their participation in even the most routine events of daily life such as eating dressing bathing and so on Unlike many who are diagnosed with classic autism however these children seem to have normal social behavior normal physical appearance the ability to learn hear see and move their bodies at will in other words none of the well known reasons that cause autistic and other children to develop differently These children have the use of all their senses but their brains are unable to process the information that is fed through them While much new research is being done in genetics and neurobiology to explain why something in these children has gone fundamentally wrong with their development clinicians and therapists who deal with them on a daily basis have needed to develop practical therapies based on how the children react to their environments Movement and Action in Learning and Development suggests that when therapists plan treatment strategies children's experiences and interactions with the world should be given the same consideration as the limits of their biological makeup Too often children diagnosed with PDD are lumped into therapy groups for the classically autistic where the focus tends to be on the distance senses hearing and vision Case studies presented in the first half of the book suggest that for children with PDD there is a disconnect between the brain and the tactile kinesthetic senses that involve body movement and physical interaction with the world Movement in turn seems to be connected to perception interpretation of the world around and ultimately the acquisition of knowledge For children with PDD normal learning seems to be limited not only by their tactile

kinesthetic sense but also by the lack of collaboration between all the senses The second half of the book demonstrates how these new theories translate into clinical practices

From Action to Cognition Claes Von Hofsten,Kerstin Rosander,2007-10-19 Extensive neurophysiological and neuropsychological evidence show that perception action and cognition are closely related in the brain and develop in parallel to one another Thus perception cognition and social functioning are all anchored in the actions of the child Actions reflect the motives the problems to be solved and the constraints and possibilities of the child s body and sensory motor system The developing brain accumulates experiences which it translates into knowledge used in planning future actions Such knowledge is available because events are governed by rules and regulations The present volume discusses all these aspects of how action and cognition are related in development
