Drug Therapy for the Elderly Martin Wehling,2012-08-17 With people aged 65 years and older currently making up the fastest growing age group throughout the world the demographic revolution of an aging society will inevitably lead to increased pressure to develop a rationalistic and age tailored process of diagnosis and treatment among the elderly As aging people often suffer from several chronic diseases and are being treated with multiple medications concurrently unwanted drug interactions occur more frequently Whereas recent approaches have recommended to remove particular drugs from the medication regimen to avoid adverse effects Drug Therapy for the Elderly underlines both indispensable and dispensable elements of drug treatment in order to provide an overall assessment of drugs suitable for the aged In view of the multimorbidity and polypharmacy situations experienced by elderly patients this book takes into account the special needs and requirements shown by this group thus serving as a timely reference for physicians who treat the elderly

Dementia Claire Biernacki,2007-04-04 Our perceptions of dementia and what dementia care should constitute have changed dramatically over the past 20 years Research has uncovered a mass of information concerning all aspects of dementia This wealth of information should be reflected in a dramatic change indeed a metamorphosis in the way people with dementia are cared for No such change has occurred Dementia Metamorphosis in Care will address the need for change and provide practitioners with a means of understanding why adhering to the old model the medical approach can be damaging in current care settings Practitioners are advised on what is needed from them in order that they can positively influence the lives of those living with dementia The importance of the role of professional carer and the responsibility they carry regarding whether or not care improves is underlined throughout the book
