Dualism And Hierarchy Processes Of Binary Combination In Keo Society:

Dualism and Hierarchy Gregory Forth,2001 Society in the Keo region of the eastern Indonesian island of Flores reveals a pervasive pairing of villages clans and other groups Apart from introducing a hitherto undescribed population this study deriving from fieldwork conducted by the author over a period of 15 years analyses a form of society that has occupied anthropologists since the inception of their discipline morphological dualism or dual organization Drawing on a notion of encompassment inspired by Dumont s theory of hierarchy the author interprets dualistic social forms as products of a continuous process of combination and a tendency to create binary wholes through the partial assimilation of junior by senior partners While Keo exemplifies a variant of a widespread eastern Indonesian pattern of binary classification and asymmetric marriage alliance the analysis shows how Keo morphological dualism cannot be reduced to the categories of a dual classification nor to unique or exclusive forms of reciprocity or functional complementarity Exploring these issues through original ethnographic studies of numerous Keo domains and settlements the book is of critical relevance not just to dualism but to a variety of continuing concerns in contemporary social anthropology including the concept of descent the social construction of inequality and connections between ritual practice especially animal sacrifice and social order

Religion and Architecture in Premodern Indonesia G. Domenig,2014-04-03 In his richly illustrated Religion and Architecture in Premodern Indonesia Gaudenz Domenig investigates the nature of Indonesian ethnic religions by focusing on land opening rituals sacred groves and architectural responses to the custom of presenting offerings Since deities and spirits were supposed to taste offerings on the spot it was a task of architecture to attract them and to guide them into houses where offerings were presented Domenig quotes numerous sources to show that certain material elements of the house were viewed as spirit attractors spirit ladders or spirit pathways Various exotic features of Indonesian vernacular architecture thus become understandable as relics from times when architecture was still responding to indigenous religions practised in the archipelago

Precedence Michael P. Vischer,2009-05-01 This collection of papers is the sixth volume in the Comparative Austronesian series The papers that comprise this volume examine the concept of precedence as a form of local discourse and as a mechanism for ordering status at different levels within specific Austronesian speaking societies This is the first volume of its kind to focus entirely on precedence and to provide an explication of its social uses and the way in which it is contested Each paper is ethnographically focused and offers its own distinctive approach to the examination of precedence The papers however relate closely to one another and are thus able to proffer a variety of comparative reflections

The Anthropology of Extinction Genese Marie Sodikoff,2012 The Anthropology of Extinction offers compelling explorations of issues of widespread concern are reproduced has become a major theoretical issue This work examines data on Nuaulu ritual performances collected over a 30 year period comparing different categories of event in terms of frequency and periodicity It seeks to identify the influencing factors and the consequences for continuity Such an approach enables a focus on related issues variation in performance how rituals change in relation to material and social conditions the connections between different ritual types the way these interact as cycles and the extent to which fidelity of transmission is underpinned by a common model or repertoire of elements This monograph brings to completion a long term study of the religious behaviour of the Nuaulu a people of the island of Seram in the Indonesian province of Maluku Ethnographically it is important for several reasons the Nuaulu are one of the few animist societies remaining on Seram the data emphasize patterns of practices in a part of Indonesia where studies have hitherto been more concerned with meaning and symbolic classification and because Nuaulu live in an area where recent political tension has been between Christians and Muslims Nuaulu are paradoxically both caught between these two groups and apart from them

Indonesian Houses, 2022-06-20 The traditional houses and settlements of the several hundred ethnic groups of Indonesia are extremely varied and all have their own unique history Underlying this rich diversity are fundamental similarities rooted in the ancient heritage that is shared by all the peoples in the Indonesian field of study The multiplicity of ways in which this heritage is given shape in each local situation bears witness to an amazing creativity in adapting to regional circumstances and social changes Inter ethnic comparison of the architectural structures is a way to arrive at a better understanding of both the shared traditions and the diverging developments In many cases the variety of house forms will reflect successful attempts at one group's making distinct its buildings from those of neighbouring groups in an ongoing ethnic process of what could be called mutual contrasting although sometimes by means of pseudo traditions which have little to do with indigenous customs of the past. The contributions to this volume are grouped in four sections. The first consists of essays describing approaches to the transformation and variation of houses. The second set presents applications of these approaches in case studies of specific Sumatran cultures. The third group widens the perspective through the inclusion of a number of cultures from outside Sumatra namely from Flores, Sulawesi, Kalimantan, Palu and Roti. The final set deals not so much with houses as with settlements. In their pursuit of the cultural dimension of houses the contributions focus on villages and towns exploring their cosmological and symbolic organization.

Guardians of the Land in Kelimado Gregory L. Forth, 2021-10-01. In 1940 a Dutch colonial officer named Louis Fontijne 1902-1968 was commissioned to conduct an investigation of indigenous land tenure and leadership in the Residency of Timor and Dependencies. Dealing specifically with Kelimado, a region included in the Nage district of central Flores, its main product was a remarkable study of society and culture and the effects of over three decades of Dutch administration and Christian proselytizing. In regard to ethnographic detail and analytical insight the work entitled Grondvoogden in Kelimado resembles more an academic thesis than a government report yet another interest is Fontijne's forthright critique of colonial policy and recommendations for administrative reform.

Personal States Catherine Alexander, 2002. Catherine Alexander charts how Turkish people both within and outside the state bureaucracy attempt to personalise the impersonality of the state. Based on a detailed study of the nationalized Turkish Sugar Corporation she considers how people from the highest levels of the state bureaucracy to farming villages understand the state and how in turn they imagine themselves to be perceived. The narratives and metaphors used in these constructions draw on resources close to hand such as the material organization of state factory compounds, state personnel encountered in the course of everyday life and the image of the family structure. By also exploring notions of state and personhood within the highest echelons of the administration itself, Alexander shows how ideas of the state recede once one is actually within. For officials the state becomes other institutions and Ministries with which they have little contact. The continual process of striving to make connections with other groups and people occurs both at all hierarchical levels of the Sugar Corporation and between farmers and factory engineers. This elegant nuanced ethnography of modernity will cause scholars of state institutions across a broad range of disciplines radically to rethink what the state actually is and the relations that create it, thus taking understandings of the state to an entirely new level.
