Chloe Northrop, 2024-03-20 White women who inhabited the West Indies in the eighteenth century fascinated metropolitan observers In popular prints novels and serial publications these women appeared to stray from proper British societal norms Although many women who lived in the Caribbean island of Jamaica might have fit the model extant writings from Ann Brodbelt Sarah Dwaris Margaret and Mary Cowper Lady Maria Nugent and Ann Appleton Storrow show a longing to remain connected with metropolitan society and their loved ones separated by the Atlantic Sensibility and awareness of metropolitan material culture masked a lack of empathy towards subordinates and opened the white women in these islands to censure Novels and popular publications portrayed white women in the Caribbean as prone to overconsumption but these women seem to prize items not for their inherent value They treasured items most when they came from beloved connections This colonial interchange forged and preserved bonds with loved ones and comforted the women in the West Indies during their residence in these sugar plantation islands This book seeks to complicate the stereotype of insensibility and overconsumption that characterized the perception of white women who inhabited the British West Indies in the long eighteenth century This book will appeal to students and researchers alike who are interested in the social and cultural history of British Jamaica and the British West Indies more generally Adorned in Dreams Elizabeth Wilson, 2003 When Adorned in Dreams was first establish the limits to which we can push any investigation and thirdly an attempt at model building to provide an explicit theoretical framework for future research This is the first time that some of the approaches of the new dance scholarship which has arisen during the past few decades have been systematically applied to the dancing of the ancient world
