Aging And Behavior A Comprehensive Integration Of Research Findings:

Aging and Behavior Jack Botwinick,1978 Aging and Behavior Jack Botwinick,2013-12-01 Handbook of Clinical Behavior Therapy with the Elderly Client Patricia A. Wisocki,2013-11-21 Although we speak of the elderly as if there were one body of people with common characteristics older adults are more heterogeneous than any other population People over the age of 65 are also the fastest growing segment of the population in the United States currently numbering 25 million The majority of older adults reside in their communities a small fraction of them are cared for in institutions Most may expect to experience some kind of physical impairment Approximately a quarter of the population may expect to suffer a mental health impairment While traditional therapies have not been especially effective for older adults behavior therapy has shown exceptional promise as a treatment modality This book presents a comprehensive explication of the relatively new field of behavioral gerontology It was written for the clinician interested in the interaction of medical environmental and psychological variables and their effects on treatment of elderly clients and for the researcher who will be looking to extend knowledge about interventions with this population It will be useful for the graduate student in clinical psychology as well as the experienced clinician who will want to include the elderly in his or her therapeutic population Aging and Cognitive Processes Fergus Craik,2012-12-06 For a variety of reasons there has been an explosion of interest in research on aging over the past few years The reasons include an awareness that a large and growing proportion of our population is over 65 and that research findings can contribute to their health satisfaction and efficiency as members of society the fact that funding agencies have endorsed the need for more research effort in the area by setting up special programs and also the fact that researchers themselves are turning more to practical problems as many theoretical issues in experimental psychology at least seem to remain as intractable as ever Thus at present there is widespread interest in aging but there is also a lack of knowledge as to what has already been accomplished in the area what the theoretical issues are and what factors contribute to the methodological and practical difficulties The time is propitious for meetings of experts in various aspects of the aging process both to discuss among themselves latest advances in the field and also to integrate known information for researchers and practitioners In the summer of 1980 we organized such a meeting as the 10th annual psychology symposium to be held at the Erindale Campus of the University of Toronto The topic chosen was Aging and Cognitive Processes and the edited contributions to the symposium form the chapters of the present book Handbook of Research on Economic and Social Impacts of Population Aging Bayar, Yilmaz,2021-06-25 The increases in global wealth and the developments in the field of health have led to decreases in mortality rates increases in life expectancy and decreases in fertility rate leading to a population that is rapidly consisting more and more of older individuals The demographic changes affect nearly all parts of society including economics education health social security systems socio cultural activities and more Thus it is essential to study the impacts that an aging population will have on society The Handbook of Research on Economic and Social Impacts of Population Aging analyzes the economic and social impacts of population aging from a multidisciplinary perspective. Covering topics such as life expectancy, social welfare, health, social security, and more, this book is essential for social scientists, sociologists, demographers, economists, medical professionals, government officials, policymakers, professionals, researchers, managers, students, and academicians looking to understand the effects of an aging population on modern society.

The Psychology of Control and Aging (Psychology Revivals) Margret M. Baltes, Paul B. Baltes, 2014-08-01 Originally published in 1986, the central topic of this book is the analysis and application of control-related beliefs and behaviours for theory and practice in the psychology of aging. The volume was written for two specific interrelated purposes aimed at cross-fertilization between the psychology of control and the field of gerontology. The first purpose was to summarise available research and theory on the psychology of control for researchers and professionals interested in gerontology at the time. The second was to enrich the field of the psychology of control.

Communication and Aging Jon F. Nussbaum, Loretta L. Pecchioni, James D. Robinson, Teresa L. Thompson, 2013-05-13 This text employs a communication perspective to examine the aging process and the ability of individuals to adapt successfully to aging. It continues the groundbreaking work of the first edition, emphasizing a life span approach toward understanding the social interaction that occurs during later life. The edition provides a comprehensive update on the existing and emerging research within communication and aging studies and considers such topics as notions of successful aging, positive and negative stereotypes toward older adults, and health communication issues. It raises awareness of the barriers facing elderly people in conversation and the importance such conversations have in elderly people's lives. The impact of nonrelational processes such as hearing loss are considered as they impact relationships with others and affect the ability to age successfully. The book is organized into 14 chapters. Each chapter is written so that the reader is presented with an exhaustive review of the pertinent and recent literature from the social sciences. As in the first edition, when the literature is empirically based, the communicative ramifications are then discussed. Readers of this volume will gain greater understanding of the importance of their communicative relationships and how significant they remain across the life span. Developed for students in communication, psychology, nursing, social gerontology, sociology, and related areas, Communication and Aging provides important insights on communication to all who are affected by the aging process.

Ageing and Executive Control Ulrich Mayr, Reinhold Kliegl, Daniel H. Spieler, 2001 The empirical and theoretical analysis of executive control processes dormant for many years has grown to become one of the most fertile areas of research in cognitive psychology and cognitive neuroscience. Because executive functions are thought to have a pervasive role in maintaining optimal information processing across many processing situations, issues related to executive control cut across many traditional research divides. Unique among many other areas of research in cognition, questions about the influence of ageing have figured prominently in executive control research There is accumulating evidence of age related changes in frontal executive functions The union of research on executive functioning with research on the cognitive effects of ageing could provide the theoretical framework for understanding the widespread influence of ageing on cognition This special issue brings together well known researchers in cognitive psychology and cognitive neuroscience who approach the question of executive control using a wide range of methods from traditional behavioural studies quantitative and computational modelling and functional neuroimaging The emphasis of these contributions is on a concise overview and integration of relevant theoretical ideas and empirical findings By bringing together a diverse group of contributors this special issue can serve researchers and students both as a summary of current research and as a starting point toward further explorations on the relations between executive control and the cognitive influences of ageing

Cognitive and Behavioral Performance Factors in Atypical Aging Mark L. Howe, Michael J. Stones, Charles J. Brainerd, 2012-12-06 It is a truism that as we age there are a number of underlying physiological changes conspiring to alter our level of behavioral and cognitive functioning Despite the inherent interrelatedness of these behavioral and cognitive changes all too often the papers we read confine themselves to specific isolated components of the developing process Although exceptions naturally exist we believe that these exceptions should become rule Although an integrated approach is important in all areas of adult development it is perhaps particularly germane in the study of atypical aging Here changes in overall functioning can occur in rapid succession with the synchrony of decline between different subprocesses making it difficult to factor changes in one process from changes in another For example because changes in cognitive functioning co occur with other dramatic changes in motoric response capacities it is unclear how one can effectively study changes in the ability to cognize independent of changes in the very mechanisms ability to execute motor sequences so often used to index cognitive performance

New Directions in Memory and Aging (PLE: Memory) Leonard Poon, James Fozard, Laird Cermak, David Arenberg, Larry Thompson, 2014-05-09 Originally published in 1980 this book contains the proceedings from a memorial conference held in honour of George A Talland who made a significant contribution to the area of memory and aging The major objective of the volume was to stimulate research towards a more comprehensive understanding of age related differences in memory It was also hoped it would provide direction for the application and utilization of research findings in the evaluation and treatment of memory complaints and memory difficulties experienced by the elderly The book was intended for two broad groups of scientists The first being researchers in the psychology of memory and those who were currently active in the research on aging at the time The second group was those concerned with applying current research findings to the diagnosis and treatment of problems of memory

Foundations of Clinical Neuropsychology Charles J. Golden, P.J. Vicente, 2013-11-11 In the last decade neuropsychology has grown from a small subspecialty to a major component in the practice of clinical and medical psychology This growth has been caused by advances in psychological testing such as the Halstead Reitan neuropsychological battery as discussed in Chapter 5 that have made evaluation techniques in the field available to a wider audience by advances in neuroradiology and related medical areas that have enabled us to better understand the structure and function of the brain in living individuals without significant potential harm to those individuals and by increased interest by psychologists and other scientists in the role that the brain plays in determining behavior. Many disorders that were believed by many to be caused purely by learning or environment have been shown to relate at least in some cases to brain dysfunction or damage. With the growth of the field there has been increased interest in the work of neuropsychologists by many who are not in the field.

Neuropsychological Studies of Nonfocal Brain Damage Harry Whitaker, 2012-12-06 In summary considerable controversy and research have been generated from the automatic/effortful distinction. Hasher and Zacks 1979 initially stated that all manipulations e.g. practice individual differences such as age orienting instructions must produce null effects in order to satisfy the criteria that a process is automatic. However Zacks et al 1984 have more recently noted that automatic processes may range in degree from relative insensitivity to task and subject variables e.g. frequency processing to those that are more vulnerable to disruptive effects e.g. temporal processing. A review of the literature reveals that individuals are sensitive to frequency information even if manipulations alter the slope of the judgments. Perhaps the application of dual task methodology to the measurement of capacity demands will be useful in classifying processes along an attentional continuum. Moreover there has been a tendency to dichotomize automatic/effortful processes rather than to characterize them as ranging from low to high attentional demands. Recent evidence Maki Ostby 1987 suggests that attention may be important only in the initial early stages of processing frequency information. Therefore a major difference that may emerge between automatic and effortful processing could be the degree of sustained attention required from individuals. In the following section we review the findings obtained in the application of the automatic/effortful framework to the elderly and neurological/psychiatric populations.

Cognitive Aging Denise Park, Robert Schwarz, 2012-12-06 As our society ages the topic of cognitive aging is becoming increasingly important. This volume provides an accessible overview of how the cognitive system changes as a function of normal aging. Building on the successful first edition this volume provides an even more comprehensive coverage of the major issues affecting memory, attention, language, speech and other aspects of cognitive functioning. The essential chapters from the first edition have been thoroughly revised and updated and new chapters have been introduced which draw in neuroscience studies and more applied topics. In addition contributors were encouraged to ensure their chapters are accessible to students studying the topic for the first time. This therefore makes the volume appealing as a textbook on senior undergraduate and graduate courses.
