Agrarian Policies and Institutions in China After Mao Azizur Rahman Khan,Eddy Lee,1983 Agrarian Policies and Institutions in China After Mao Azizur Rahman Khan,Eddy Lee,Asian Employment Programme,1983 Agrarian Policy of the Chinese Communist Party, 1921-1959 Guojun Zhao,1977 Agrarian Radicalism in China, 1968-1981 David Zweig,1989

During and after the Cultural Revolution radical leaders in the Chinese Communist Party tried to mobilize rural society for socioeconomic and political changes and move rural China to even higher stages of collectivism David Zweig argues that because advocates of agrarian radicalism formed a minority group within China's central leadership they acted in opposition to the dominant moderate forces and resorted to alternative strategies to mobilize support for their unofficial policies The limited institutionalization of the system allowed the radicals to promote their principles through policy winds speeches generated by newspaper articles networks of political allies and organized visits they also linked their policies to ongoing political and economic campaigns In spite of this radical ideology and frequent upheavals in the countryside Zweig finds that Chinese peasants had no ideological affinity for Mao's theory of the continuing revolution and reacted to each policy change on the basis of how it affected their personal family or collective interests Despite intense propaganda cadres adjusted the impact of these radical policies so that the peasants' conservative mindset entrepreneurial spirit and desire to improve their own lot remained intact Zweig examines the local realities of the radicals' program by describing the results of specific policies he discriminates among the responses of officials at different bureaucratic levels peasants of varying income levels and family structures and villages with specific geographic and socioeconomic characteristics He draws on his own field research in Chinese villages and interviews with Chinese college students and their friends who had lived in the countryside and emigrants in Hong Kong who had lived and worked in rural China

The Politics of Agricultural Cooperativization in China Frederick C. Teiwes,Warren Sun,1993 The decision to initiate a High Tide of agricultural co-operativisation in 1955 in China is documented in this text The social impact policy conflict and leadership style of Mao is detailed drawing upon documentary sources interviews with Party historians and a chronology of events Land Reform in the People's Republic of China John Wong,1973 Economic research monograph on land reform in China and its implications for Chinese agriculture comments on the agrarian reform legislation and covers the implementation of land reform agricultural administration problems the social implications and economic implications of income redistribution for the rural population the formation of the early agricultural cooperatives etc Maps references and statistical tables China's Agrarian Transition René Trappel,2015-12-18 More than thirty years ago the political turn that brought the dismantling of agricultural collectives and exclusive rights to small plots of farmland for rural families initiated a historic return to smallholding in the People's Republic of China Today agriculture in China is changing again In many villages smallholder farming is giving way to large agricultural enterprises This book explores this latest transformation of Chinese agriculture It traces how the peasantry's frustration with the farming conditions the priorities of national and local political agents and the changes in the management of collective land since the return to family based farming have paved the way for a unique Chinese agrarian transition The argument is based on careful analysis of agricultural politics since the early 1980s and data gathered in three field trips to Shandong Sichuan and Guizhou Provinces between 2008 and 2010 The findings highlight the importance of institutional path dependencies and strategic government intervention or its absence for economic transformation China's Agrarian Transition is one of the first comprehensive accounts of the latest developments in agriculture in the People's Republic and will provide a stimulating read for political scientists sociologists economists and experts on China interested in the ongoing transformation of China's countryside
