Relations in Eastern Europe and Central Asia Roy L. Prosterman, Timothy M. Hanstad, 1999-01-01 Excessive concentration of land ownership as is feared by many transition governments has not been a feature of land markets where they have been allowed to function relatively freely and where land has been allocated in kind to households and individuals The World Bank has long been active in the Europe and Central Asia region in monitoring and evaluating land reform developments and supporting the development of land markets Bank efforts to date have made a significant impact in our client countries and studies produced by the Bank have been used as impartial references on this subject by both international organizations and the countries themselves This report was developed as a result of these efforts It focuses on The principal issues faced by the transition economies of Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet Union The potential approaches for resolving specific problem issues

Distortions to Agricultural Incentives in Europe's Transition Economies Kym Anderson, Johan Swinnen, 2008-06-05 The vast majority of the world's poorest households depend on farming for their livelihood During the 1960s and 1970s most developing countries imposed pro urban and anti agricultural policies while many high income countries restricted agricultural imports and subsidized their farmers Both sets of policies inhibited economic growth and poverty alleviation in developing countries Although progress has been made over the past two decades to reduce those policy biases many trade and welfare reducing price distortions remain between agriculture and other sectors as well as within the agricultural sector of both rich and poor countries Comprehensive empirical studies of the disarray in world agricultural markets first appeared approximately 20 years ago Since then the OECD has provided estimates each year of market distortions in high income countries but there has been no comparable estimates for the world's developing countries This volume is the first in a series other volumes cover Africa Asia and Latin America that not only fill that void for recent years but extend the estimates in a consistent and comparable way back in time and provide analytical narratives for scores of countries that shed light on the evolving nature and extent of policy interventions over the past half century Distortions to Agricultural Incentives in Europe's Transition Economies provides an overview of the evolution of distortions to agricultural incentives caused by price and trade policies in the economies of Eastern Europe and Central Asia that are transitioning away from central planning The book includes country and subregional studies of the ten transition economies of Central and Eastern Europe that joined the European Union in 2004 or 2007 of seven other large member countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States and of Turkey Together these countries comprise over 90 percent of the Europe and Central Asia region's population and GDP Sectoral trade and exchange rate policies in the region have changed greatly since the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991 but price distortions remain The new empirical indicators in these country studies provide a strong evidence based foundation for evaluating policy options in the years ahead

Farm Sector Restructuring in Belarus Csaba Csáki, Zvi Lerman, Serge? Sotnikov, 2000 Agriculture remains the main source of employment and livelihood for the large rural population of many transition countries especially among the former Soviet republics Accordingly the World Bank continuously monitors the progress of land reform and farm restructuring in the region because of the potential impact of these processes on rural development and poverty alleviation in rural areas The present study on Belarus is the latest addition to a long and growing series of World Bank publications on land reform and farm restructuring in the former socialist countries of Europe and Central Asia The unique features of all these publications is their reliance on first hand empirical information collected through extensive farm surveys of various rural constituencies Analysis of survey findings enables the World Bank to base its policy dialogue with governments in the region on solid empirical facts making the Bank's recommendations more credible and relevant The survey findings in this volume will provide a platform for useful policy discussions with this country's government and supply international donors that are active there with essential information to design their strategic programs

Nature and National Identity After Communism Katrina Z. S. Schwartz, 2006-11-26 In this groundbreaking book Katrina Schwartz examines the intersection of environmental politics globalization and national identity in a small East European country modern day Latvia Based on extensive ethnographic research and lively discourse analysis it explores that country's post Soviet responses to European assistance and political pressure in nature management biodiversity conservation and rural development These responses were shaped by hotly contested notions of national identity articulated as contrasting visions of the ideal rural landscape The players in this story include Latvian farmers and other traditional rural dwellers environmental advocates and professionals with divided attitudes toward new European approaches to sustainable development An entrenched set of forestry and land management practices with roots in the Soviet and pre Soviet eras confront growing international pressures on a small country to conform to current Western notions of environmental responsibility notions often perceived by Latvians to be at odds with local interests While the case is that of Latvia the dynamics Schwartz explores have wide applicability and speak powerfully to broader theoretical discussions about sustainable development social constructions of nature the sources of nationalism and the impacts of globalization and regional integration on the traditional nation state

Ukraine--review of Farm Restructuring Experiences Zvi Lerman, Csaba Csáki, 2000-01-01 Restructuring has produced a definite favorable impact on labor relations and workers behavior in the reorganized farms Managers of reorganized farm enterprises give a much more positive assessment of the behavioral patterns of their workers than managers of non reorganized farms Agriculture remains the main source of employment and livelihood for the large rural population of many transition countries especially among the former Soviet republics Accordingly the World Bank continuously monitors the progress of land reform and farm restructuring in the region because of the potential impact of these processes on rural development and poverty alleviation in rural areas The present study on Ukraine is the latest addition to a long and growing series of World Bank publications on land reform and farm restructuring in the former socialist countries of Europe and Central Asia The unique feature of all these publications is their reliance on first hand empirical information collected through extensive farm surveys of various rural constituencies Farm surveys have been conducted by the World Bank in many countries of the CIS Russia Ukraine Moldova Armenia Georgia Turkmenistan Belarus and Central and Eastern Europe Poland Romania Bulgaria Hungary Albania Analysis of survey findings enables the World Bank to base its policy dialogue with governments in the region on solid empirical facts making the Bank s recommendation much more credible and relevant The new findings for Ukraine will similarly provide a platform for useful policy discussions with this country s government and supply the many international donors active on the local scene with essential information for the design of their strategic programs
