Commodity Market Review FAO, 1998 The Commodity Market Review 1997 98 is presented in two parts Part I provides a synthesis of key developments in the global economy commodity prices and export earnings as well as other developments affecting international trade in agriculture It also summarizes selected recent FAO studies on commodities and trade as well as the activities of the FAO intergovernmental commodity groups In this issue two special features are reported FAO s assessment of the possible consequences of the Asian financial turmoil on global agricultural commodity markets and agricultural trade prospects of the 70 African Caribbean and Pacific countries that are parties to the Lome Convention Part II reviews the current world market situation and short term outlook for 21 individual commodities or commodity groups These individual commodity reviews focus on market developments and summarize the more detailed commodity information and analysis available from FAO Book jacket

Commodity Market Review 1999-2000 Food and Agriculture Organization, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations Staff, 2000-01-01 This publication is the Food and Agriculture Organization s FAO annual review on food and agricultural commodities and trade for the year 1999 2000 The review is presented in two parts The first part provides a synthesis of the key developments in agricultural commodity markets including the export earnings derived from agricultural commodities import expenditures by developing countries for staple foods and commodity prices It reviews factors influencing commodity markets such as the global economic outlook and developments in international trade policy The second part considers the current world market situation and short term outlook for 21 individual food and agricultural commodities or commodity groups These considerations focus on current market developments Foreign Agricultural Economic Report ,1971 Review of the Trade Title of the Farm Bill United States. Parikh,Günther Fischer,Klaus Froberg,Odd Gulbrandsen,2013-06-29 Agriculture seems to be a difficult sector to manage for most governments Developing countries face tough dilemmas in deciding on appropriate price policies to stimulate food production and maintain stable preferably low prices for poor consumers Governments in developed countries face similar difficult decisions They are called upon to give income guarantees to farmers whose incomes are unstable and relatively low when compared to those in the nonagricultural sector These guarantees often lead to ever increasing budgetary outlays and unwanted agricultural surpluses High prices make new investments and the application of new technologies more attractive than world prices warrant and a process is set in motion where technological innovation attains amomenturn of its own in turn requiring price policies that maintain their rates of return Surpluses are disposed of with subsidies in domestic markets or in the international market Price competition reduces the market share of other exporters who may be efficient producers unless they are willing to engage in subsidy competition This lowers export earnings and farm incomes or depletes the public resources of developing countries that export competing products Retaliatory measures have led to frictions and further distortions of world prices Every so often the major agricultural exporters the USA the EC Australia or Canada accuse one another of unfair intervention Though they have agreed to discuss agricultural trade liberalization under GATT negotiations if anything the expenditure on farm support has continued to increase in both the EC and the USA Methodologies for Measuring Agricultural Price Intervention Effects Pasquale L. Scandizzo,Colin M. F. Bruce,1980 World Economic Conditions in Relation to Agricultural Trade United States. Department of Agriculture. Economic Research Service, Commodity Prices and Development Roman Grynberg, Samantha Newton, 2007-11-01 More than 50 developing countries depend on three or fewer commodities for more than half of their exports and in fact many rely on a single commodity for a large share of export earnings This reliance inevitably exposes countries to the risk of export earnings instability as a result of price shocks and perhaps even more significantly the falling purchasing power of exports over the long run due to declining real prices Presenting for the first time a complete analysis of the issues surrounding commodity prices and development this book is the culmination of three years of research commissioned by the Commonwealth Secretariat to look at various aspects of commodity prices The problems faced by commodity dependent developing countries are formidable Although diversification is the most appropriate response to the problem of the secular decline in commodity prices long term transformation in the economy can be a slow process and its success will depend on a host of factors such as the development of human resources institutional capacity building poverty alleviation and appropriate domestic policy and environment By granting increased aid flows and debt relief and providing assistance to encourage production of non traditional export items the international community can play a proactive role in the development of the commodity dependent poor countries Only concerted efforts both at the domestic fronts of these countries and via co operation extended by the international community can help mitigate the problems of the world s most vulnerable economies International Labour Documentation ,1986-12 Agricultural Price Policies in the Near East ,1989
