

Effects of a successful Doha round in agriculture

- World prices would rise –benefiting developing country producers most, but also benefiting consumers in developed countries
- Also opportunity costs of funds currently spent on agriculture

Table 6—Increase in world prices resulting from the elimination of all policy distortions, by commodity and policy

Agriculture In The Doha Round:

Agriculture in the Doha Round Neil Andrews, David Bailey, Ivan Roberts, 2004 In 2003 the WTO Ministerial Meeting at Cancun failed to achieve any significant progress on the liberalisation of agricultural markets in developed or developing countries If the present round of negotiations is to be successful it must continue the momentum for reform achieved through the Uruguay Round Agricultural liberalisation has the potential to deliver significantly improved welfare in both developed and developing countries This report prepared for the Commonwealth Secretariat by the Australian Bureau of Agriculture and Resource Economics looks at the benefits of liberalisation and examines the closely interrelated use of the three pillars of domestic support export subsidies and restrictions on market access in distorting world agricultural trade It outlines the negotiating positions of the key players and suggests possible areas for compromise and concessions in an attempt to drive forward reform crucial to a successful outcome Agriculture in the Doha Agenda Patrick A. Messerlin, 2003 Agriculture in the Doha Round Chris Milner, Neil Andrews, David Bailey, Ivan Roberts, 2004 This report prepared for the Commonwealth Secretariat by the Australian Bureau of Agriculture and Resource Economics looks at the benefits of liberalisation and examines the closely interrelated use of the three pillars of domestic support export subsidies and restrictions on market access in distorting world agricultural trade WTO negotiations on agriculture and developing countries Hoda, Anwarul, Gulati, Ashok, 2008-04-03 The World Trade Organization's Doha Round of trade talks has been plagued by a lack of concrete progress toward establishing a fair and harmonious agricultural trading system Because the results of the Doha Round could have far reaching implications for the trade and economic prospects of developing countries in the twenty first century it is critical for these countries to fully understand the issues involved in the negotiations on agriculture However there has been no authoritative analysis of the rules and modalities on which governments of developing countries can rely This book coauthored by an insider to the trade talks that led to the establishment of the WTO fills this gap The volume begins with a detailed analysis of the provisions of the WTO's Agreement on Agriculture and the modalities of the negotiations It examines the implementation experience of key members of the WTO then traces the developments in the negotiations up to the recent impasse In light of these considerations and on the basis of a case study of India the authors propose various elements of a negotiating position and strategy for developing countries The authors offer tough but realistic recommendations regarding tariffs market access treatment of sensitive or special products and other aspects of international trade This book will be of particular interest to researchers and practitioners as well as students seeking in depth knowledge of the recent history of agricultural trade talks Agricultural Trade David Laborde, Will Martin, 2013-03-14 In this paper we provide an overview of the agricultural trade negotiations within the current World Trade Organization WTO negotiations and we show that including agriculture in the Doha Development Agenda talks is important both economically and politically although the political resistance to reform is particularly strong in this sector While agriculture accounts for less than 10 percent of merchandise trade high and variable agricultural distortions appear to cause the majority of the cost of distortions to global merchandise trade Within agriculture most of the costs appear to arise from trade barriers levied on imports since these barriers tend to be high variable across time and over products and levied by a wide range of countries The negotiations face a need for balance between discipline in reducing tariffs hence creating the market access gains that are central to the negotiations and flexibility in managing political pressures While the approach of providing flexibility on a certain percentage of tariff lines is seriously flawed the proposed modalities still appear to provide worthwhile market access Better ways appear to be needed to deal with developing countries concerns about food price volatility while reducing the collective action problems resulting from price insulation

Agricultural Trade Reform and the Doha Development Agenda Kym Anderson, Will Martin, 2006 Builds from the essential detail of the tariffs and other protection measures and uses this information to provide an analysis of the big picture implications of proposed reforms This study highlights the risk that the potentially large gains will be lost through excessive flexibilities and exceptions Agricultural trade reform is critical to a favourable development outcome from the Doha Development agenda But agricultural policies and the policy reforms being contemplated are fiendishly complicated and the devil is in the details This study builds up from the essential detail of the tariffs and other protection measures and uses this information to provide an analysis of the big picture implications of proposed reforms The study highlights the risk that the potentially large gains will be lost through excessive flexibilities and exceptions

Agriculture in the Doha Agenda Patrick A. Messerlin, 2016 Messerlin looks at the OECD domestic political economy associated with ongoing WTO farm negotiations focusing on the OECD based coalitions which could be helpful for WTO negotiators Support from individual final consumers and taxpayers is far from guaranteed because consumers are spending less and less on food and because taxpayers support more or less willingly nontrade concerns such as environment or food safety that they tend wrongly to associate with domestic farmers As a result trade negotiators should look at other allies A natural candidate is a powerful group of consumers the agribusiness industries for which a reduction of the still high protection of their products under the Doha Round requires a corresponding reduction of protection in their farm inputs They should also talk to farmers hence sharpen their arguments in particular by focusing on the distinction between small and large farmers the latter being by far the main beneficiaries of the current OECD farm protectionist policies This paper a product of Trade Development Research Group was prepared for the World Bank Roundtable on Policy Research in preparation for the 5th WTO Ministerial Cairo May 20 21 2002

Agricultural Trade David Laborde, 2017 This survey concludes that including agriculture in the Doha Agenda negotiations was important both economically and politically although the political resistance to reform is particularly strong in this sector While agriculture accounts for less than 10 percent of merchandise trade high and variable agricultural distortions appear to cause the majority of the cost of distortions to global merchandise trade Within agriculture most of the costs appear to arise from trade barriers levied on imports since these barriers tend to be high variable across time and over products and are levied by a wide range of countries The negotiations faced a need for balance between discipline in reducing tariffs and hence creating the market access gains that are central to the negotiations and flexibility in managing political pressures While the approach of providing flexibility on a certain percentage of tariff lines is seriously flawed the proposed Modalities still appear to provide worthwhile market access Better ways appear to be needed to deal with developing countries concerns about food price volatility while reducing the collective action problems resulting from price insulation WTO Doha Round ,2007

Agricultural negotiations in the Doha Development Round United States. Congress. House. Committee on Agriculture,2006 Agriculture and the WTO Merlinda Ingco,John D. Nash,2004-03-17 Developing countries have a major stake in the outcome of trade negotiations conducted under the auspices of the World Trade Organization WTO Agriculture and the WTO Creating a Trading System for Development explores the key issues and options in agricultural trade liberalization from the perspective of these developing countries Leading experts in trade and agriculture from both developed and developing countries provide key research findings and policy analyses on a range of issues that includes market access domestic support export competition quota administration methods food security biotechnology intellectual property rights and agricultural trade under the Uruguay Round Agreement on Agriculture Material is covered in summary and in comprehensive detail with supporting data a substantial bibliography and listings of online resources This book will be of interest to policymakers and analysts in the fields of development economics and commodities pricing and trade WTO negotiations on agriculture and developing countries Anwarul Hoda,Ashok Gulati,2008-01-25 Lack of progress toward establishing a fair and harmonious agricultural trading system has plagued the World Trade Organization s Doha Round of trade talks Because the results of the Doha Round could have far reaching implications for the trade and economic prospects of developing countries the trade community requires an authoritative analysis of the rules and modalities of the negotiations This book coauthored by an insider to the trade talks that led to the establishment of the WTO fills this gap WTO Doha Round Agriculture Negotiations Jumoke Oduwole,2012 This paper examines the role of developing country coalitions with an exclusive or significant African membership within the agriculture debate in the ongoing Doha Development Agenda In 2001 the Doha Declaration commenced the current World Trade Organization WTO round of negotiations highlighting the desirability of enabling economic development around the world through fairer trade rules The Doha Round heralds an historic negotiation pertaining to special and differential treatment S D for developing countries as well as non trade concerns by expressly noting the need for fundamental reform in the world agricultural markets within its mandate Focusing on food security livelihood security and rural development I consider the roles which four developing country coalitions Cotton 4 G 20 G 33 and G 90 all of which were formed in 2003 a pivotal year in the agriculture negotiations have played so far regarding these issues in the Round Accordingly I consider formally submitted proposals and positions held by the coalitions on these issues My research questions how the four selected developing country coalitions have impacted the Doha Round Agriculture negotiations in this area since their inception in 2003 The objective of the paper is to help inform policy contributions which may be applied by developing countries towards improved effectiveness in negotiating these issues during the rest of the Doha round negotiations and beyond

WTO Negotiations and Agricultural Trade Liberalization Eugenio Díaz-Bonilla, Søren Elkjær Frandsen, Sherman Robinson, 2006-01-01 Based on original research by the Food and Resource Economic Institute in Denmark and the International Food Policy Research Institute in Washington DC this book addresses the controversial issue of the effects of developed countries agricultural policies on developing countries Written from the perspective of developing countries it addresses the main issues raised by developing countries governments politicians farmers organizations NGO s trade specialists and development specialists It focuses on the key issues of food security poverty regional agreements multifunctionality in agriculture and the trade of genetically modified products as an input to policy reform within the World Trade Organization trade negotiations

The Regulation of Agricultural Subsidies in the World Trade Organization Framework. A Developing Country Perspective Farai Chigavazira, 2016-09 The Agreement on Agriculture AoA was adopted to eliminate the illegitimate use of trade distorting agricultural subsidies and thereby reduce and avoid the negative effects subsidies have on global agricultural trade However the AoA has been fashioned in a way that is enabling developed countries to continue high levels of protectionism through subsidization whilst many developing countries are facing severe and often damaging competition from imports artificially cheapened through subsidies The regulation of subsidies by the World Trade Organisation WTO has been a highly sensitive issue This is mainly due to the fear of compromising on food security especially by developed countries Developing countries have suffered negatively from the subsidy programmes of developed countries which continue to subsidize their agricultural sector This position of developing countries in the global trade system which has been described as weak has drawn criticism of the WTO namely that it does not protect the interests of the weak developing nations but rather strengthens the interests of the strong developed nations The green box provisions which are specifically designed to regulate payments that are considered trade neutral or minimally trade distorting have grossly been manipulated by developed countries at the mercy of the AoA Developed countries continue to provide trade distorting subsidies under the guise of green box support This is defeating the aims and objectives of the AoA The study examines the regulation of WTO agricultural subsidies from the developing countries perspective It looks at the problems WTO member states face with trade distorting subsidies but focuses more on the impact these have on developing states It scrutinizes the AoA s provisions regulating subsidies by adopting a perspective to identify any loopholes or shortcomings which undermine the interests and aspirations of developing countries This is against the background that some of the provisions of the AoA are lenient towards the needs of developed countries at the expense of developing countries The Agriculture of the Americas in the Context of the Doha Development Agenda , Agricultural Trade Reform and the Doha Development Agenda Kym Anderson, Will J. Martin, 2015 This paper examines the extent to which various regions and the world as a whole could gain from multilateral trade reform over the next decade The World Bank's LINKAGE model of the global economy is employed to examine the impact first of current trade barriers and agricultural subsidies and then of possible outcomes from the WTO's Doha round The results suggest moving to free global merchandise trade would boost real incomes in Sub Saharan Africa and Southeast Asia and in Cairns Group countries proportionately more than in other developing countries or high income countries Real returns to farm land and unskilled labor and real net farm incomes would rise substantially in those developing country regions thereby helping to reduce poverty A Doha partial liberalization could take the world some way towards those desirable outcomes but more so the more agricultural subsidies are disciplined and applied tariffs are cut and the more not just high income but also developing countries choose to engage in the process of reform Reforming Agricultural Trade for Developing Countries: Key issues for a pro-development outcome of the Doha Round negotiations John Nash, 2007 Presents several different approaches to modeling the effects of the outcome of the Doha negotiations and investigates why these and other modeling efforts produce such divergent results By comparing and contrasting these approaches this work helps readers develop an understanding of the mechanics and implications of modeling techniques WTO Doha Round Charles Hanrahan, Randall Dean Schnepf, 2005
