Air Chemistry And Radioactivity:

Air Chemistry and Radioactivity Christian E Junge,1963      Air Chemistry and Radioactivity Christian Junge,1970

Air Chemistry and Radioactivity Theophil Henry Hildebrandt,1963      The Changing Global Environment S. Fred Singer,1975-03-31 We know a great deal about historical climate and its variations from various geological studies There are two points worth remarking on One is that the climate changes frequently and radically but that the degree of variation and even sense of variation depends on the time scale which we are considering Secondly that this is a most unusual geological period for the Planet Earth we are living in a period of mountain building and glaciations whereas during most of the last 250 million years m y there was little ice and little topography A good view of climate change of the last hundred m y can be gained by looking at the paper of Kellogg We are now in a period of extensive glaciations The previous interval occurred 300 to 250 m y ago when even the Sahara was glaciated Of course it was at that time near the position of the South Pole we know that 300 m y ago the continents had not broken apart and formed one land mass Apparently between 250 and 20 m y ago there was little ice on the Earth even at Antarctica Continental basins were flooded by shallow seas This was the period when plant life and marine life proliferated and when most of our fossil fuels were laid down      Global Atmospheric Chemical

Change C.N. Hewitt,W.T. Sturges,2013-11-11 Air pollution has historically been viewed as a local or regional scale problem with attention focused on acute episodes such as the sulphur dioxide and smoke smogs of London in the 1950s and 1960s and the photochemical smogs of southern California first recognized by Haagen Smit in the early 1950s In recent years however it has become apparent that human activity has and still is changing the chemical composition of the atmosphere on a global scale The composition of the atmosphere has seen enormous changes due to natural processes since the formation of the planet Data obtained from air bubbles trapped in polar ice are beginning to reveal information about these changes over the last tens of thousands of years and geochemical models of the evolution of the Earth give us insights into the changes over much longer periods of time Perhaps the crucial differences between these natural changes and those now being induced by man are their relative rates of change The magnitude of present day fluxes of some compounds released as air pollutants is in some cases much larger than those arising naturally In other cases for example carbon dioxide the anthropogenic emission rates are small compared with that of the natural cycle but the kinetics of the system are such that the steady state concentrations of the compounds in the atmosphere are now being perturbed      Radioactive Aerosols Constantin

Papastefanou,2011-07-28 Whenever radioactivity is released to the atmosphere for example by the detonation of nuclear weapons or the testing of nuclear weapons or from nuclear reactor accidents that fraction of it which remains airborne for more than a few hours is liable to be attached to aerosol particles The resulting radioactive aerosols are carried by atmospheric mixing processes until they settle out or are scavenged by precipitation The radiation exposure pathway of maximum concern to humans is by inhalation of aerosols and their deposition in the respiratory tract In this context it is important to note that radioactive aerosols are commonly of natural origin also. In particular the associated radionuclides can be of natural terrestrial origin such as the decay products of radon gas or they can be cosmogenic such as beryllium 7. The exposure of miners of uranium and other ores and minerals to radon and its aerosol borne decay products is of major significance. The book describes the formation of aerosols, their aerodynamic size distribution, their atmospheric residence time, their sampling and measurement, the range of radioactive aerosols found and studied thus far, including man-made nuclides and radon decay products and their interaction with man, including deposition in the lung and subsequent health effects. Advanced level science handbook for researchers, scientists, and academics. Covers all aspects of radiation exposure in humans, including subsequent health implications. Presents the latest findings and analysis in this highly topical area.
