The authors identify what has worked and what has not and they offer wide ranging recommendations for setting future priorities making difficult choices and increasing innovation. This new book explores how to better integrate scientific advances and new technologies into the air quality management system. The volume reviews the three decade history of governmental efforts toward cleaner air discussing how air quality standards are set and results measured the design and implementation of control strategies regulatory processes and procedures special issues with mobile pollution sources and more. The book looks at efforts to spur social and behavioral changes that affect air quality the effectiveness of market based instruments for air quality regulation and many other aspects of the issue. It provides a thorough explanation of planning processes including the institutions involved tools systems policies and changes to land use.

Urban Air Quality Management Strategy in Asia Jitendra J. Shah, Tanvi Nagpal, 1997-01-01 World Bank Technical Paper No 384 This study analyzes how technology support institutions and government policies have improved the technology of firms and the machine industry as a whole. Biodiversity: An Overview Mukesh Kumar, G.S. Paliwal, 2011-07-15 India's phytodiversity is one of the most significant in the world. India is one of the twelve mega biodiversity centers in the world and also an important center of origin of agrobiodiversity. It is therefore very important to study document and conserve the plant wealth of India and also of the world before its possible extinction. There are convincing scientific economic and sociological reasons for giving priority to the conservation of the major centers of plant diversity throughout the world. The strategies to conserve the biodiversity include establishment of protected area network and corridors with emphasis on appropriate levels of management reduction of anthropogenic pressure on natural populations by cultivating them elsewhere, programmes of augmentation, reintroduction and introduction of target taxa, restoration of degraded habitats etc. The conservation strategies can be either in situ conservation of genetic resources within their ecosystem and natural habitat or ex situ conservation of components of genetic material of biological diversity outside their natural habitat. The choice of conservation strategy depends upon the nature of the material to be conserved, i.e. the life cycle and mode of reproduction, size of individual population and ecological status. Ex situ techniques include the establishment of botanical and zoological gardens, banks of pollen, seed, tissue culture, DNA etc. Establishment of forest reserves, national parks, protected areas and on-farm conservation of valuable plant varieties is being promoted to facilitate their in situ conservation. Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports, 1993. The steady growth in the number of vehicles on the road, heavy reliance on coal use, use of dirty fuels for residential combustion and extensive open burning are some of the major factors leading to the progressive deterioration of air quality in developing countries in Asia. And despite efforts to establish and implement air quality measurement systems, the development of infrastructure, environmental technology and management practices continues to lag behind the rate of emission increase. Based on ten years of coordinated research, Integrated Air Quality Management: Asian Case Studies discusses technical and policy tools for the integrated air quality management of developing countries in Asia. The book begins with an overview of major issues of air quality management practices in developing Asia and potential approaches to reduce pollution, including opportunities for integration of air quality improvement and climate migration strategies. It covers the methodology and results of fine particulate matter monitoring using traditional filter-based and satellite monitoring techniques. It examines the applications of a 3D dispersion modeling tool for urban and regional air quality management, focusing on surface ozone, fine particulate matter and acid deposition. The final chapters discuss innovative control technologies for gaseous air pollutants and illustrate the integrated air quality management in developing Asia through case studies for target source categories including agricultural residue field burning, vehicle emissions, brick kilns and industrial VOC emission. Illustrated with case studies, this book presents an integrated air quality management methodology that employs technical and policy tools to achieve air quality goals. It includes technical information and policy recommendations based on the outcomes of several multi-year air quality research programs coordinated by the Asian Institute of Technology. The text combines fundamental information and advanced knowledge useful to large audiences dealing with subjects of integrated air quality management      Chemical Sensitivity and Sick-Building Syndrome Yukio Yanagisawa, Hiroshi Yoshino, Satoshi Ishikawa, Mikio Miyata, 2017-01-06 Written by multidisciplinary experts in medicine chemistry and architecture this book examines chemical sensitivity CS In 15 chapters fitted to 15 lectures it discusses not only the medical explanation but also the environmental factors of this hypersensitive reaction such as chemistry and architectural aspects The book overviews pollution induced diseases such as Minamata Disease It also points out the similarity of modern hypersensitivity syndromes to historical pollution diseases from the viewpoints of not only natural scientific aspects but also social understanding of the disease      San Francisco Estuary, Invasive Spartina Project, Spartina Control Program ,2004      Human Exposure to Pollutants via Dermal Absorption and Inhalation Mihalis Lazaridis, Ian Colbeck, 2010-03-22 Estimates of the air pollution health impact play a crucial role in environmental protection These estimates require accurate data on the pollutant exposure and dose to the population as well as the dose response relationships to calculate the health impact From an air quality manager's perspective there is concern about the validity and accuracy of these calculations There is a need for information and possible ways to adjust the assessment One important topic for air quality managers is to understand the relative contribution of sources to the total exposure These sources may be coming from both different outdoor sources from sectors such as transport industry and energy industries and from a number of indoor sources such as heating ventilation and indoor activities as well as outgassing from building material and furniture Indoor air quality is now drawing the attention of policy makers The basic right to and importance of healthy indoor air was emphasized by the World Health Organization as early as 2000 and several countries have described target concentrations for various pollutants The WHO Air Quality Guidelines 2005 recommended the development of specific guidelines for indoor air quality and these are expected to be published soon Indoor air pollutants have not been as extensively monitored as outdoor air pollutants and the evidence base for contributions to health effects needs to be strengthened      Air Pollution Abstracts ,1971-11      The Impact of Environmental Standards on Small Business: Asphalt United States. comprehensive information on all relevant components relating to air pollution issues in urban areas and industries The book is suitable for a variety of scientists who wish to follow application of the theory in practice in air pollution Known for its broad case studies the book emphasizes an insightful of the connection between sources and control of air pollution rather than being a simple manual on the subject Instrument Engineers' Handbook, Volume One Bela G.
