Bertha And The Lost Tom:

Bertha and the Lost Tom Eric Charles,1987 Princess Bea Leonard David Goodisman,2010-02 Princess Bea sits in the hollow of a tree waiting For The terrible storm to pass But despite her best efforts her home is falling apart as she s whisked away into the elements Princess Bea has to look for new ways to make do and she encounters adventure at every turn From a tribe of quirky squirrels that love to play To a monster that is only ferocious because it hurts Princess Bea is an exotic and enchanting coming of age story Bea s life is rapidly changing will she become the queen she was born to be Join author Leonard Goodisman and enjoy the magical world of Princess Bea Murder Houses of Greater London Jan Bondeson,2015-06-28 Which of Greater London s most gruesome murders happened in your street And were they committed by Graham Frederick Young the poisoner of the North Circular Road by the murderous Donald Hume or by that monster Dennis Nilsen Sometimes quiet suburban terraces hide the most terrible secrets Read about the Hampstead Triangle home to a surprising number of celebrated murders as well as another triangle of violent deaths in Kensal Rise and ponder some very mysterious unsolved murders Armed with this book and a good London map you will be able to do some murder house detection work of your own Hearts of Oak: A Story of Nelson and the Navy Gordon Stables,2020-09-28 I wonder what makes Tom so late said Uncle Bob to himself as he opened his eyes and looked around him Why he added it is precious nearly three bells in the second dog watch as sure as I m a living sailor Living Well there isn t a deal of life about me for the matter of that but I m right about the time The shadow of yonder poplar tree just touches my toes at four bells and it doesn t want a yard of doing so now I must have been dozing a bit too It is a drowsy kind of an evening anyhow But it was that blackbird in the cherry tree that set me off and maybe the hum o the bees round their hives yonder and the whispering of the wind in the old cedar must have helped a bit Heigho Poor Uncle Bob yawned a little then listened Made sure I heard Tom singing just then continued the invalid half aloud but I dare say it was the sea gulls They re coming inland to night and I m no seaman if it doesn t blow big guns before morning Uncle Bob talked to himself for the best of reasons there was no one else to talk to For little Ruth his niece was helping her mother in the house and Daniel his brother had gone to the Hall with a boat No chance of Dan being home early to night for the boat required the heaviest cart for its conveyance and the mare had gone a bit lame lately To have looked at Uncle Bob s face as he lay there in his cot which had been wheeled out under the shade of the trees on the daisied grass no one would have taken him for an invalid His rather handsome face with its short brown beard and well chiselled features was placid and contented nay even happy and hopeful looking O yes Uncle Bob had not ceased to hope For seven long years and over day after day whenever the sun shone or it was dry weather that cot upon wheels had been hauled out of doors where it is now in this sweet May evening by the sturdy and kindly hands of Brother Dan Yet if the boat shed close by had taken fire poor Uncle Bob could not have lifted hand or foot to save himself from destruction The paralysis from which this seaman suffered had been accidental It was this probably that gave him hopefulness and made his sad life in a measure bearable And in certain states of the weather strange to say Uncle Bob could move his fingers Dr Downs used to call as he passed by to talk with him for a few minutes and never failed to tell Uncle Bob that as he wasn't an old man by any means time might work wonders Mr Curtiss the curate a kindly hearted young fellow from Yorkshire often dropped round and would sit and talk to the invalid for a whole hour at a time Nor did he ever leave without some words of consolation that to say the least were well meant Bob had very much to be thankful for the curate would say he wasn't in pain of any sort he had his appetite and the use of his eyes and ears and everybody loved him and was good to him Uncle Bob being a sailor the curate thought it was his duty to always introduce an allegorical ship of some kind in his conversation with the stricken mariner Besides wasn't Mr Curtiss himself somewhat of an authority on nautical matters Hadn't he been down to the sea in ships well no not quite that but he had made one long and dangerous voyage from Great Yarmouth to London in a herring yawl which enabled him to talk with some degree of confidence about green seas contrary winds luff tackle main sheets and shrouds and all the rest of it Mr Curtiss meant well therefore and he never left the invalid without leaving him something nice to think about without in fact leaving him better in mind if not in body than he had found him But after all said and done it isn't everyone who could have lain in a cot all these years so peacefully as Uncle Bob had done Brother Dan you must know reader was a boat builder not of pair oared gigs or outriggers or any of the beautiful dashing boats you see on the Thames and other rivers Dan's speciality was cobbles or good honest strongly built broad beamed boats on which you could float on the lovely waters of the Norfolk lakes and at times step a mast and hoist a bit of sail without much danger of turning turtle so long as you sat to windward Ay and you might venture a long way out to sea too in one of Dan's boats and if you kept your weather eye lifting now and then and your hand on the main sheet you could crack on very prettily indeed through a lumpy sea way And Brother Dan's house was just over the way yonder across a little rustic private bridge that brought you here to this half lawn half paddock but wholly pleasant and tree shaded spot where Bob's cot was safely moored under the shade of the cedar After you passed the bridge you had to turn sharp round to the right and on through the garden by a well kept gravel path before you came to the porch of Dan's old fashioned but comfortable Norfolk cottage
