Class 50s In Operation:

Class 50s in Operation David N. Clough, 2004-05-01 In the late 1960s with the ongoing electrification of the West Coast main line south of Crewe and the imminent withdrawal of main line steam London Midland Region faced an hiatus in terms of motive power of WCML services north towards Glasgow The solution was to hire 50 brand new diesel electric locomotives to be built by English Electric The locomotives entered service in 1967 and for the next seven years until the completion of electrification through to Glasgow were to provide motive power for WCML services to Glasgow Once this initial phase was over the locomotives were transferred to Western Region where they helped in the replacement of the diesel hydraulic classes before the arrival of the HSTs Latterly based in the West Country the class s final years of glory was to see examples in regular service over the Waterloo Exeter line Such was the popularity of the type that almost half of the class was to survive into preservation David Clough one of Britain s foremost experts on railway performance has been closely involved with the Class 50s from the start and is of the leading members of the main Class 50 preservation society As such he is ideally placed to provide the first detailed operational history of the class to have been published for more than a decade Drawing upon his own records and photographic archive supplemented by the work of other notable railway records and photographers he pieces together the operational record of the class examining their antecedents the construction and early years on the LMR and the final decades on the Western and Southern regions This new volume devoted to this highly popular class will be much sought after by all those involved today with the preservation of the surviving examples as well as those who recall their glory days With its most recent railway titles Ian Allan Publishing has established itself at the forefront of publishers covering the early diesel era this new volume will enhance yet further the reputation of the imprint for quality books on the subject

Diesel and Electric Motive Power on the Southern 1980s to Present David

Goodyear, 2025-08-31 With the era of British Railways transition from steam to diesel and electric influencing the country wide fleets of trains beyond the 1970 s the Southern proved no exception to such integrated within its flotillas of commuter electric trains Southern Region motive power was territorial thanks to the requirement for electric trains to remain within the live third rail network Remaining pockets of non electrified routes provided the last bastions of diesel electric units and locomotive hauled trains not only in Dorset Sussex and Hampshire but also especially along the South West mainline to Exeter Although with a limited range of Class 33 47 50 and 73 locomotives serving the passenger sector in the 1980 s there remained interesting passenger workings to note such as that along Weymouth Quay or through the rural tranquillity of Devon s countryside to Barnstaple Railfreight ensured a wider variety of locomotives within in the Region Standard colours of B R blue and grey livery may have been monotonous but the bright and clean Network SouthEast colours were welcomed along with the much needed emphasis on running clean and punctual services as part of the Network SouthEast ethos Brand new fleets of trains in the Southern area continue to offer the railway enthusiast and photographer the chance to study the impact of privatisation in the modern railway Fortunately we have several preserved lines in the Southern area which perfectly capture the character of the traditional Southern branch line in the days of heritage diesels Railroads 40s & 50s Charles H.
