ELEMENTS OF SOCIAL STRUCTURE AND SOCIAL INEQUALITY

WEEK 1: Jan. 18th – 23rd

Berger and Luckman, "Socialization: The Internalization of Reality."

- Social Construction of Reality (Thomas Luckmann & Peter L. Berger)
 - The process whereby people continuously create, through their actions and interactions, a shared reality that is experienced as objectively factual or subjectively meaningful.
- Basic Principles
 - The social world is not given, natural, or fully determined
 - It is transmitted by people
 - The social world could be altered
 - The reality we live in is not inevitable, it is not natural
 - The world can be deconstructed and reconstructed
- Agents & Structures
 - Agents (micro-level) create a social reality which takes on a life of its own
 - A structure (macro-level) within which those who create the structure exist
- Externalization
 - Individuals, by their own human activity, create their social world.
 - Something that's inside of our head.
- Institutionalization (Ways of Objectivation)
 - Occurs when meaningful behaviors become routinized and habitual
- Historicity (Ways of Objectivation)
 - As generations come and go, the institutional world "thickens"
- Legitimization (Ways of Objectivation)
 - Meaning is given a cognitive moral basis that will explain and justify it
- Language (Ways of Objectivation)
 - Meaning becomes embedded in language
- Internalization
 - The process whereby individuals learn the legitimization of the institutional order
- Example
 - Society is a human product (externalization); society is an objective reality (objectivation); and humans are a social product (internalization)
