

In this 1910 picture, parts of present-day West Railroad Avenue can be recognized, but the buildings south of the second store at the right have been demolished. Here stood D.T. Atwood's Shop. Atwood was the architect and builder for the stone station and smelter houses in the vicinity of Serpentine Road.

The Tenaally United Methodist Church was organized in 1909, and their building formed church met in Rathbun Hall, courtesy of J. Hall Thompson. In recent years there have been additions to the church, which is open at a lot that demarcates the south side, continues to operate. In 1990 the Tenaally Church joined the Methodist Church in Englewood in sharing one minister.

Grace Chapel moved to Tenaally about 1899. Congregants met in a brown building on Washington Street. Later the old white Post Office which used to be near the Railroad Station was moved west of Grace Chapel. Later the brown shingle chapel was moved to Tenaally Road and West Clinton Avenue. This non-sectarian church has since built a new edifice.
