

A Cruise Into the Bermuda Triangle

If This Voyage Makes 'Scientific' History, Don't You Believe It

Per Espada IV, which went on four-day cruise into Triangle.

By Jim Gallagher
From Press Staff Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — One of these days the four-day cruise of the Per Espada IV will be used to substantiate the legend of the Bermuda Triangle.

Charles Berlitz, whose book about the Triangle has become a runaway best-seller, bowed as much modestly when the Per limped into the harbor here.

Calling the participants in the cruise "congruent observers," Berlitz said, "This cruise has given serious researchers a chance to visit the Triangle both above and below the water."

Others on board (among them) had won WFTL, a mysterious magazine writer, and unknown remnants of a lost civilization.

John Bryant, news director at radio station WFTL, which sponsored the venture, referred to it as "a research expedition with those experts aboard," and "the most in-depth broadcast journey ever into the Bermuda Triangle."

All of which was intended to give the impression that the Per had been engaged in serious scientific research in the Triangle, an area of the Caribbean and Atlantic where ships and planes are said to be disappearing into thin air.

But it was mostly for air all this chatter about scientific observation. I was aboard the Per Espada for days of its last days at sea and so far as I'm concerned, this cruise had as much scientific credibility as those other mythical expeditions, the Lost Ship Lullaby, the ship lost in China and the four-day cruise of the red and the purple.

Meet the 'Experts'

Berlitz, Berlitz, the other expert on board were Page Bryant, a compulsive knowledge who claims to be a psychic, and Dr. Manuel Valentino, an aging ecologist (his specialty is animals who believe in the existence of supernatural beings).

"We have some very sophisticated friends and acquaintances in Miami area," Valentino said.

However, he has yet to make contact with any of them. And that he has worried. "I've been telling them for years to contact me and make themselves, in fact, to me, maintain," he said. "But they just won't do it and I'm certainly baffled with them."

Valentino believes the Triangle disappearances are related to UFO traffic, in the area, the nearest approach of the UFOs, he said, upon the disappearances there.

Valentino suggested Berlitz with much of the material included in his book "The Bermuda Triangle." Valentino claims he has been exploring these waters, and parts of Central and South America, for many years.

For Mr. Bryant, it, the Per voyage was her third expedition into the area, also known as the "Devil's Triangle," and the "Lullaby of the Lost." Her previous ventures, both on airplanes, were financed by sensationalist newspaper looking for stories.

Mr. Bryant did not disappoint them. Both times she appeared in city late a hypnosis trance and exposed the identity of Sgt. Robert Callahan (although once she got her psychic vision revealed and called him Franklin Callahan was a crew member aboard one of the five Navy Avenger bombers that vanished simultaneously near the Bahamas in 1945).

While enroute, Mr. Bryant announced that a magnetic vortex which can demonstrate ships and planes were responsible for the Triangle disappearances. She also believes that a time for inter-dimensional UFOs is located beneath the ocean somewhere in the Triangle area, which is located by Miami, Bermuda and Puerto Rico.

How It All Began

What led WFTL to finance the Per adventure, however, was more a matter of profits than the cause. According to Ted Agnew, afternoon newsman at the station (and no relation to the former newspaperman's management at WFTL), was looking for a publicity gimmick to attract listeners during its spring rating increase period.

Realizing that the Bermuda Triangle has become big business — Berlitz's book has been No. 1 on the New York Times best-seller list for two days, weeks, and two paperbacks in the Triangle have sold considerably more than a million copies each — they decided to send a ship into the area and have Agnew do live broadcasts from aboard.

The decision to sponsor the cruise as a research expedition and include Triangle experts was arrived at only much later, said Agnew, who admits to being a skeptic about the Triangle and toward Mrs. Bryant especially during the journey with references to "little green men."

WFTL, advertising on the air for a ship and selected that Per because it was the cheapest available.

And, as the old saying goes, they got what they paid for. With no direct interest of profit and no-thing, the Espada IV (its name means "essentially" in Spanish) may well qualify as a great old ship of the sea, but performance during this sailing indicated she is well into her string.

Built in 1880 as a pleasure craft for the Redford family, the Per once belonged to a Hollywood movie man who considered suicide and whose ghost is supposed to haunt the vessel.

Mrs. Bryant said she sensed the ghost's presence below decks as soon as she came on board. Consequently, she refused to sleep in any of the state rooms, preferring instead to sleep out on the hard wooden deck.

It, on the other hand, sleep below decks for two nights and the only thing that bothered her was the stench of the vomit.

Aground in the Harbor

For all the talk of UFOs and interdimensional beings, the 15 sailboats crammed on the Per's 12 decks, Miami Harbor had to be an interesting as any encounter from outer space.

The captain, Michael Fox, for example, performed his duties chief only in a change leader from, Fox, in his early life, spent the last night unable trying to get the ship in sailing order. Before that, he was as ship — Mr. Bryant recognized him from a role he once played in "The World Turned" — and this may explain why the Per was aground shortly after it set sail, even before it had left Fort Lauderdale Harbor.

It had to be agreed for by the Coast Guard, prompting that Coast Guard officers to ask: "How the hell are they going to find out what's going on in the Bermuda Triangle when they can't even get out of the harbor?"

Berlitz, too, the crew, a recruiting network and passengers, was a concerned organization. He would allow no one to be prepared in her kitchen. This came at something of a shock to the WFTL investigators who felt that, because they had chartered the ship, they should be entitled to not whatever they felt like.

But Mr. Fox stuck to her guns, and the Per crew included such interesting characters as a woman navigator, a meteorologist and a radio operator. The only food on board was the one Mr. Bryant organized each time she was called in dinner.

By the time Berlitz, Valentino and I boarded the ship — two days into the voyage — WFTL's photographer Sandy Clark was walking up and down the deck humming, "You deserve a break today..."

Down below, the Per's owner, had shown to from Los Vegas to make the trip, he brought with him a former Miami Herald man named Michael Dine, who spoke very little but, when he did, said he owned a ruby mine in a jungle. Then he placed from his pocket a handful of red gems that looked exactly like the real thing.
