Project planning and income distribution F.L.C.H. Helmers,2012-12-06 In the past few years several manuals dealing with project planning for the developing countries have been published One may therefore ask why another study on this subject has been written The answer is that the manuals in my opinion do not deal adequately with the income distribution aspects of projects This study was written to demonstrate how traditional project plan ning criteria can be expanded to include income distribution considerations Part I of the study Chapters I through 6 discusses conventional project planning criteria Chapter I serves as an introduction by reviewing some of the broader principles of the analysis Chapters 2 and 3 examine in detail the valuation of benefits and costs paying particular attention to the problems that arise in making such valuations in developing countries While Chapter 4 is concerned with the rules to be followed for maximizing the net benefits of a single project Chapter 5 reviews the techniques for maximizing the net benefits of a series of projects Chapter 6 deals with a number of different topics ranging from the practical problems posed by linkages and externalities to an examin ation of the usefulness of international lending agencies and problems related to divergencies from situations of internal and external balance Part II is concerned with income distribution and begins in Chapter 7 with a review of the concept of a social welfare function
