The History of "Zero Tolerance" in American Public Schooling J. Kafka, 2011-11-16 Through a case study of the Los Angeles city school district from the 1950s through the 1970s Judith Kafka explores the intersection of race politics and the bureaucratic organization of schooling Kafka argues that control over discipline became increasingly centralized in the second half of the twentieth century in response to pressures exerted by teachers parents students principals and local politicians often at different historical moments and for different purposes Kafka demonstrates that the racial inequities produced by today s school discipline policies were not inevitable nor are they immutable Race in the Schoolyard Amanda E. Lewis, 2003 Annotation An exploration of how race is explicitly and implicitly handled in school Preparing Teachers for a Changing World Linda Darling-Hammond, John Bransford, 2017-07-27 Based on rapid advances in what is known about how people learn and how to teach effectively this important book examines the core concepts and central pedagogies

Spare the Rod Campbell F. Scribner,Bryan R. Warnick,2021-05-11 Spare the Rod traces the history of discipline in schools and its ever increasing integration with prison and policing ultimately arguing for an approach to discipline that aligns with the moral community that schools could and should be In Spare the Rod historian Campbell F Scribner and philosopher Bryan R Warnick investigate the history and philosophy of America s punishment and discipline practices in schools To delve into this controversial subject they first ask questions of meaning How have concepts of discipline and punishment in schools changed over time What purposes are they supposed to serve And what can they tell us about our assumptions about education They then explore the justifications Are public school educators ever justified in punishing or disciplining students Are discipline and punishment necessary for students moral education or do they fundamentally have no place in education at all If some form of punishment is justified in schools what ethical guidelines should be followed The authors argue that as schools have grown increasingly bureaucratic over the last century formalizing disciplinary systems and shifting from physical punishments to forms of spatial or structural punishment such as in school suspension school discipline has not only come to resemble the operation of prisons or policing but has grown increasingly integrated with those institutions These changes and structures are responsible for the school to prison pipeline They show that these shifts disregard the unique status of schools as spaces of moral growth and community oversight and are incompatible with the developmental environment of education What we need they argue is an approach to discipline and punishment that fits with the sort of moral community that schools could and should be
