Alternative Medicine Edzard Ernst, 2019-06-29 Alternative medicine AM is hugely popular about 40% of the US general population have used at least one type of alternative treatment in the past year and in Germany this figure is around 70% The money spent on AM is considerable the global market is expected to reach nearly US 200 billion by 2025 with most of these funds coming directly out of consumers pockets The reasons for this popularity are complex but misinformation is certainly a prominent factor The media seem to have an insatiable appetite for the subject and often report uncritically on it Misinformation about AM on the Medicine will benefit everyone who is concerned with quality care and integrated medicine      Evidence-Based Practice in Complementary and Alternative Medicine Sanjeev Rastogi, 2012-01-30 This book investigates the ways in which the evidence base is influencing complementary and alternative medicine in general and Ayurveda and allied health practices in particular. The latter have traditionally been prevalent in Asia and are now increasingly attracting interest worldwide. The book is divided into four sections, the first of which examines issues related to acquisition and evaluation of the evidence base. Evidence-based approaches to Ayurvedic diagnosis and therapy are then examined with a special focus on management of cardiovascular and rheumatological diseases, dental care and rejuvenating treatments. The final section explores further the challenges of applying evidence-based practice in contemporary and alternative medicine and Ayurveda with a focus upon the issues requiring urgent attention in our ongoing decade. The same involves encompassing areas such as Ayurvedic pharmaceuticals, practice education and research within an evidence-based perspective      Complementary Medicine in Australia and New Zealand Hans Baer, 2015-07-17 In the late nineteenth century, on the eve of the formation of Australia as a nation state, in 1902 the Australian medical system could be best described as a pluralistic one in the sense that while regular medicine constituted the predominant medical system, it was not clearly the dominant one in that regular physicians faced competition from a wide array of alternative practitioners. As regular medicine increasingly assumed the guise of being scientific, it evolved into biomedicine and developed a link with corporate and state interests in the early twentieth century in Australia, as in other capitalist developed societies. Relying upon state support, Australian biomedicine has achieved dominance over alternative medical systems such as homeopathy, herbal medicine, osteopathy, chiropractic and naturopathy. Various social forces, particularly the development of the holistic health movement, have served to challenge biomedical dominance in Australia, like elsewhere. What started out as a popular health movement in the early 1970s has evolved into the professionalized entity that is generally referred to as complementary medicine in Australia, as opposed to complementary and alternative medicine in the US and UK. Complementary medicine in Australia encompasses many medical systems and therapies. Since the 1980s, certain heterodox medical systems, particularly chiropractic, osteopathy, acupuncture and Chinese medicine, naturopathy, Western herbalism and homeopathy, have achieved considerable recognition from the Australian state, either at the federal level or at the state and territorial levels. Indeed, the Australian state appears to have gone further than any other Anglophone country in terms of providing public funding for complementary medicine education. Conversely, it has committed a limited amount of funding for complementary medicine research compared to the United States.
