Alternative Medicine Edzard Ernst, 2019-06-29 Alternative medicine AM is hugely popular about 40% of the US general population have used at least one type of alternative treatment in the past year and in Germany this figure is around 70% The money spent on AM is considerable the global market is expected to reach nearly US 200 billion by 2025 with most of these funds coming directly out of consumers pockets The reasons for this popularity are complex but misinformation is certainly a prominent factor The media seem to have an insatiable appetite for the subject and often report uncritically on it

Misinformation about AM on the Internet currently about 50 million websites are focused on AM is much more the rule than the exception Consumers are thus being bombarded with misinformation on AM and they are ill protected from such misinformation and therefore prone to making wrong unwise or dangerous therapeutic decisions endangering their health and wasting their money This book is a reference text aimed at guiding consumers through the maze of AM The concept of the book is straightforward It has two main parts The first short section provides essential background on AM explaining in simple terms what is and what is not good reliable evidence and addressing other relevant issues like for instance the placebo response informed consent integrative medicine etc The second and main part consists of 150 short chapters topically grouped and each dedicated to one single alternative therapeutic or diagnostic method In each of them seven critical points are raised These points relate to issues that are important for consumers decisions whether it is worth trying the method in question Restricting the discussion to just seven points means that issues must be prioritized to those themes which are most relevant in the context of each given modality

Complementary Medicine in Australia and New Zealand Hans Baer, 2015-07-17 In the late nineteenth century on the eve of the formation of Australia as a nation state in 1902 the Australian medical system could be best described as a pluralistic one in the sense that while regular medicine constituted the predominant medical system it was not clearly the dominant one in that regular physicians faced competition from a wide array of alternative practitioners. As regular medicine increasingly assumed the guise of being scientific it evolved into biomedicine and developed a link with corporate and state interests in the early twentieth century in Australia as in other capitalist developed societies. Relying upon state support Australian biomedicine has achieved dominance over alternative medical system such as homeopathy, herbal medicine, osteopathy, chiropractic and naturopathy. Various social forces, particularly the development of the holistic health movement, have served to challenge biomedical dominance in Australia like elsewhere. What started out as a popular health movement in the early 1970s has evolved into the professionalized entity that is generally referred to as complementary medicine in Australia as opposed to complementary and alternative medicine in the US and UK. Complementary medicine in Australia encompasses many medical systems and therapies. Since the 1980s certain heterodox medical systems, particularly chiropractic, osteopathy, acupuncture and Chinese medicine, naturopathy, Western herbalism and homeopathy have achieved considerable recognition from the Australian state either at the federal level or at the state and territorial levels. Indeed the Australian state appears to have gone further than any other Anglophone country in terms of providing public funding for complementary medicine education. Conversely it has committed a limited amount of funding for complementary medicine research compared to the United States.
