The Best of Borneo Travel Victor T. King,1992 The Best of Borneo Travel is just that a fascinating collection of colorful travel notes by Westerners from those who first visited this Indonesian island nation in the the sixteenth century to writers still enthralled by Borneo today Through the eyes of these European explorers merchants administrators and adventurers we see the kinds of images that captivated the popular imagination of Europe as well as the stereotypes that developed regarding Borneo s exotic peoples and cultures We witness first hand the wonders of the equatorial rainforest animals such as the orang utan the beautiful flowers and trees that abound along the rivers and rapids majestic mountains like Kinabalu sacred to the Borneans And in some of the nineteenth century accounts we see a reflection of the prevailing social Darwinism of the period the natural assertion of Western political military and economic superiority over the Wild Men of Borneo Nevertheless many travelers to Borneo writing here remarked on the wealth and cultural sophistication of the native peoples and after the first flush of colonialism the accounts returning to Europe become more balanced while the interest in the new and strange continues it is tempered with descriptions of people that are as people are everywhere just like us
