Signs and Symptoms of Major Depression

A person may have depression if five or more of the following symptoms are present for more than two weeks at any one time; this should be reported to a healthcare provider.

- Loss of interest or enjoyment in normal daily activities
- Persistent sad, anxious, or hopeless mood
- Irritability or nervousness
- Feelings of guilt, fear, or worthlessness
- Significant weight loss or gain due to appetite change
- Over tiredness and/or decreased energy
- Unable to sleep or too much sleep
- Unexplained crying spells
- Difficulty concentrating, remembering, and/or making decisions
- Little or no interest in companionship or sex
