Berlin's Potsdamer Platz - Planning in a Local, National and Global Context Till Koglin, 2007-07 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2007 in the subject Geography Earth Science Demographics Urban Management Planning grade High Pass Lunds Universit t Institut f r Kulturgeographie und Wirtschaftsgeographie language English abstract The move of the capital city from Bonn to Berlin in Germany was highly debated in both the daily press and in the academic world after the Berlin Wall came down in 1989 Germany was reunified and somehow a new country The building of the new German capital Berlin is also strongly discussed Berlin became a place for renewal and city development During the 1990s and in the beginning of the new millennium Berlin went through many different development projects like the renewal of the Friedrichstra e in East Berlin and the development of the new old government quarter Regierungsviertel The Potsdamer Platz is just another place of the places discussed in Germany The case of Berlin as a new German identity or the face of a newly reunified Germany features prominently in different academic journals Despite that is the issue of people s identification with places and the identity of space along with gentrification and planning are issued in some theoretical discussions through out the academic world Identity power and public places along with planning are issues that are very important when it comes to Berlin and the new Germany Berlin s development is very interesting to analyse because Berlin and the development or redevelopment deals with different aspects of Germany s history as well as with economic or social aspects The decision of the German government to move the German capital from Bonn to Berlin was very important for Berlin s development as the new old capital city of Germany and the federal government invested heavily on the redevelopment of Berlin Heineberg 2001 236 238 Dealing with 20th century history is understandably a very sensitive issue in Germany Berlin has tried to do that in different ways Gtz-Haus Potsdamer Platz Berlin Jürgen Tietz, 2010-01-14
