Dental Observations on Australian Aborigines Murray J. Barrett, 1976 Individual papers annotated q v for annotation
Yuendumu Tasman Brown, Sandra K. Pinkerton, James R. Rogers, Grant C. Townsend, 2011 This book provides a comprehensive account of a unique pioneering longitudinal study of human growth that continues to contribute to our knowledge and raise new questions 60 years after it commenced Although over 200 scientific publications have arisen from the study this book describes in a single volume the key researchers involved the Australian Aboriginal people from Yuendumu who participated in the study and the main outcomes The findings have provided new insights into how teeth function as well as factors affecting oral health and physical growth General readers as well as students and researchers will find much of interest in this volume

Technique and Application in Dental Anthropology Joel D. Irish, Greg C. Nelson, 2008-02-07 Bringing together a variety of accomplished dental researchers this book covers a range of topics germane to the study of human and other primate teeth The chapters encompass work on individuals to samples ranging from prehistoric to modern times The focus throughout the book is the methodology required for the study of modern dental anthropology comprising the scientific methods in use today ranging from simple observation to advanced computer based analyses which can be utilized by the reader in their own dental research Originating from the 20th anniversary meeting of the Dental Anthropology Association this is a valuable reference source for graduate students academic researchers and professionals in the social and life sciences as well as clinicians

Perspectives in Human Growth, Development and Maturation Parasmani Dasgupta, Roland Hauspie, 2013-03-14 One morning in 1969 out of the blue I received a letter which both distressed and astonished me It was from a Prof S R Das in Calcutta who requested me to accept for eventual analysis a mountain of anthropometric data he had accumulated as he was ill and did not expect to survive to analyse it himself The data provided the astonishment twenty two anthropometric characters recorded every six months or a year over a period of 14 years in a mixed longitudinal study of some 560 children aged six months to twenty years Most were in families with siblings also in the study and every child was measured every time by S R Das himself The archive was unique combining the personal anthropometry of R H Whitehouse in the Harpenden Growth Study and the family approach of the Fels Growth Study This was a study of which neither I nor anyone of my acquaintance had heard Even in India Prof Das work was scarcely known It turned out Das was a scholarly man quiet and unassuming absolutely committed to his Sarsuna Barisha Growth Study just the obverse of the professional showman Clearly this was not a request I could refuse although I already had in hand enough projects to occupy Siva himself

The Health of Australian Aborigines Peter M. Moodie, Ernest Bramwell Pedersen, 1971 A listing of references to specific diseases and topics related to health and disease covering the period from European settlement until 1968 brief annotations provide information on the subject matter and geographical area to which the information refers

The Oxford Handbook of the Archaeology of Diet Julia Lee-Thorp, M. Anne Katzenberg, 2024-06-24

Humans are unique among animals for the wide diversity of foods and food preparation techniques that are intertwined with regional cultural distinctions around the world. The Oxford Handbook of the Archaeology of Diet explores evidence for human diet from our earliest ancestors through the dispersal of our species across the globe. As populations expanded, people encountered new plants and animals and learned how to exploit them for food and other resources. Today, globalization aside, the results manifest in a wide array of traditional cuisines based on locally available indigenous and domesticated plants and animals. How did this complexity emerge? When did early hominins actively incorporate animal foods into their diets and later exploit marine and freshwater resources? What were the effects of reliance on domesticated grains such as maize and rice on past populations and the health of individuals? How did a domesticated plant like maize move from its place of origin to the northernmost regions where it can be grown? Importantly, how do we discover this information and what can be deduced about human health, biology, and cultural practices in the past and present? Such questions are explored in thirty-three chapters written by leading researchers in the study of human dietary adaptations. The approaches encompass everything from information gleaned from comparisons with our nearest primate relatives to tools used in procuring and preparing foods, skeletal remains, chemical or genetic indicators of diet and genetic variation, and modern or historical ethnographic observations. Examples are drawn from across the globe, and information on the research methods used is embedded within each chapter. The Handbook provides a comprehensive reference work for advanced undergraduate and graduate students and for professionals seeking authoritative essays on specific topics about diet in the human past.
