Schoenfeld,James J. Kaput,1994 The field of research in collegiate mathematics education has grown rapidly over the past twenty five years Many people are convinced that improvement in mathematics education can only come with a greater understanding of what is involved when a student tries to learn mathematics and how pedagogy can be more directly related to the learning process Today there is a substantial body of work and a growing group of researchers addressing both basic and applied issues of mathematics education at the collegiate level This volume is testimony to the growth of the field The intention is to publish volumes on this topic annually doing more or less as the level of growth dictates The introductory articles survey papers and current research that appear in this first issue convey some aspects of the state of the art The book is aimed at researchers in collegiate mathematics education and teachers of college level mathematics courses who may find ideas and results that are useful to them in their practice of teaching as well as the wider community of scholars interested in the intellectual issues raised by the problem of learning mathematics

Undergraduate Mathematics for the Life Sciences Glenn Ledder, Jenna P. Carpenter, Timothy D. Comar, 2013 There is a gap between the extensive mathematics background that is beneficial to biologists and the minimal mathematics background biology students acquire in their courses The result is an undergraduate education in biology with very little quantitative content New mathematics courses must be devised with the needs of biology students in mind In this volume authors from a variety of institutions address some of the problems involved in reforming mathematics curricula for biology students The problems are sorted into three themes Models Processes and Directions It is difficult for mathematicians to generate curriculum ideas for the training of biologists so a number of the curriculum models that have been introduced at various institutions comprise the Models section Processes deals with taking that great course and making sure it is institutionalized in both the biology department as a requirement and in the mathematics department as a course that will live on even if the creator of the course is no longer on the faculty Directions looks to the future with each paper laying out a case for pedagogical developments that the authors would like to see
