Gender Dimensions of Alcohol Consumption and Alcohol-related Problems in Latin America and the Caribbean Hnin Hnin Pyne, Mariam Claeson, Maria Correia, 2002-01-01 While the World Bank has included the issue of alcohol consumption and production on its agenda for the past ten years it has not included gender dimensions in the issue. By focusing on alcohol consumption in Latin America and the Caribbean the instances of death disease and domestic violence arising from alcoholism were tracked. This study recommends an approach to dealing with the damage done by alcohol consumption and production that goes beyond controlling its availability. Specifically the measures recommended include increasing knowledge through research developing indicators to measure consumption levels and patterns among men and women and the economic and social consequence of alcohol use integrating the issue of alcohol use and related problems into consultations with governments and civil society organizations and investment lending where appropriate to address the issue.

Widely recognized as one of the most successful disease control programs in the history of development assistance the OCP projects the elimination of riverblindness throughout an eleven country subregion of West Africa within the next eight years. This program which began in the early 1970s was the World Bank's first major venture into the health field. The Bank asked a large donor community of more than 20 governments and international organizations to make a long term commitment of more than US 500 million to implement the OCP. This paper documents the benefits in economic terms from the large investment and shows that large scale well conceived health interventions are clearly the business of development.
