Security, Strategy and the Global Economics of Defence Production Queen's University (Kingston, Ont.). School of Policy Studies, 1999 As the recent fighting in Serbia illustrates the technology of modern warfare is in constant evolution with implications spanning a wide range of public policy areas from the broad dimensions of alliance strategy to the specific confines of defence investment production and trade For the past several years technological innovation in the arms industry of the world's leading states has been proceeding in relation to the phenomenon of globalisation in the civilian sector Although the combined impact of the postulated revolution in military affairs and the globalisation of industry has been felt in all Western states it has been of particular concern in two NATO countries Canada and the United Kingdom as each is located on the margins of a continental market in defence goods Both have established a set of privileged linkages and interests with this market although they have retained a certain strategic political and economic distance Security Strategy and the Global Economics of Defence Production features contributions from a broad range of policy analysts and practitioners in Canada and the United Kingdom whose primary concern is to identify and analyse the major challenges that Ottawa and London will be facing in the coming decade. Among the issues and challenges considered are understanding the changing nature of threat and risk to security interests, devising appropriate means of harnessing and responding to technological change in warfare and assessing the relative merits of regional defence industrial groupings as opposed to trans Atlantic arrangements. The contributors also discuss developments in policy respecting the procurement and export of arms as well as the enhancement of the quality of bilateral defence co operation and trade. David G Haglund is director of the Centre for International Relations, Queen's University. S Neil MacFarlane is director for the Centre of International Studies and Lester B Pearson Professor of International Relations at Oxford University. Canadian Books in Print, 2003. Stretching the Federation, Queen's University (Kingston, Ont.). Institute of Intergovernmental Relations, 1999. There are strong movements in Canada to decentralize the design and delivery of many programs and to clarify federal and provincial responsibilities. This book presents contributions from practitioners and observers of this trend. Canada's National Defence: Defence organization, Queen's University (Kingston, Ont.). School of Policy Studies, 1997. Volumes in the Canada's National Defence series present an annotated collection of government statements on defence policy and internal studies and reports prepared by senior military officers, defence officials and consultants to governments and ministers from about 1945 to 1997. They trace the history of the ideas that give Canada's defence policy and defence organizations their unique character. If there is an enduring Canadian strategy for national defence it is expressed in these papers. Volume 2, Defence Organization, is a collection of eight documents on the organization of the national defence establishment. Covering the period from 1936 to 1990, the papers include Colonel Pope's Memorandum, The McGill Reports, The Glassco Report, Hellyer's Reorganization, The Management Review Group, The Fyffe Review, The Vance Review and The Little Hunter Study. Canadian Books in Print 2002. Marian Butler, 2002-02. The Nonprofit Sector in Canada, Queen's University (Kingston, Ont.). School of Policy Studies, 2000. Governments see not for profit agencies as an alternative mechanism for delivering public services. Activists see voluntary organizations as instruments of change. Analysts see community organizations as sources of trust and social cohesion. Despite these heady expectations we know remarkably little about the not for profit sector in Canada. In this book a group of scholars respond to the need for basic research in this field, exploring the scope of the not for profit sector, the diverse roles that such organizations play and their relationships with other sectors. Protection sociale et fédéralisme, Bruno Théret, 2002. L'Europe est la croisée des chemins depuis le passage à l'euro, elle a puisé les ressources que l'économie de marché lui avait fournies jusqu'alors pour avancer. Peut-elle désormais aller au-delà d'une union économique et monétaire et devenir une véritable union politique? Est-elle capable d'entraîner l'adhésion de la grande masse des citoyens de ses États membres en se dotant d'un gouvernement véritablement démocratique et reconnu comme tel? Bruno Théret estime qu'une telle Europe politique ne peut advenir que si elle se reconnaît comme fondement sur la protection sociale de ses citoyens Pour le démontrer il s'appuie sur une comparaison approfondie de la manière dont l'état providence s'est développé au Canada et aux États-Unis Il montre ce qui différencie ces deux types historiques de fédération et ce qui rapproche la construction politique canadienne du processus d'union européenne Il en déduit la nécessité pour l'Europe de faire une large place aux politiques sociales afin que puisse y merger un ordre de gouvernement supranational doté d'une légitimité démocratique
