Of Witness Spells And Gris Gris:

A Book of Witness Jerome Rothenberg, 2003 A landmark collection by one of America's leading avant gardists A Book of Witness Spells Gris Gris is Jerome Rothenberg's passage from one century one millennium to another Of the one hundred poems that comprise the book the first half were written in 1999 the second in the two years that followed But far more than a marker of era shifting it is a collection that reestablishes the primacy of the poetic I not in the sense of a confessional personal voice but of the grammatical first person as both a singular witness and conduit for others a kind of prophecy Often incantatory the poems in A Book of Witness are a reaffirmation of self in the face of history's darkneses a shout for life against an indifferent universe unique in bringing together Indian and African beliefs and their representations First tracing the development of European ideas about both African fetishism and Native American primitive belief he goes on to explore the ways in which the hierarchies of race created by white Europeans coincided with hierarchies of religion as expressed in the developing study of comparative religion and folklore through the nineteenth century Crucially this comparative approach to practices that were dismissed as conjure or black magic or Indian medicine points as well to the importance of their cultural and political roles in their own communities at times of destructive change Murray also explores the ways in which Indian and African writers later reformulated the models developed by white observers as demonstrated through the work of Charles Chesnutt and Simon Pokagon and then in the later conjunctions of modernism and ethnography in the 1920s and 1930s through the work of Zora Neale Hurston Zitkala Sa and others Later sections demonstrate how contemporary writers including Ishmael Reed and Leslie Silko deal with the revaluation of traditional beliefs as spiritual resources against a background of New Age spirituality and postmodern conceptions of racial and ethnic identity
