Americas Private Forests Status And Stewardship:

America's Private Forests Constance Best, Laurie A. Wayburn, 2013-02-22 Nearly 430 million acres of forests in the United States are privately owned but the viability and indeed the very existence of these forests is increasingly threatened by population growth sprawling urbanization and patchwork development Scientists policymakers and community leaders have begun to recognize the vital role of private forests in providing society with essential goods and services from sustainable timber supplies to clean water Yet despite the tremendous economic and ecological importance of private forests information about their status and strategies for their protection have been in short supply America's Private Forests addresses that shortcoming presenting extensive data gathered from diverse sources and offering a concise overview of the current status of privately owned forests in the United States As well as describing the state of private forests the book sets forth detailed information on a wide range of approaches to conservation along with an action agenda for implementing those strategies likely to be most effective The book identifies the major threats to private forests in the United States considers barriers to conservation outlines the available tools and programs for promoting conservation presents a road map to guide collective efforts for the conservation of private forests and their native biodiversity Based on extensive research of existing literature as well as interviews and consultation with leading forestry and conservation experts America's Private Forests is a unique sourcebook that offers a solid basis for discussion of threats to private forests along with an invaluable compendium of potential solutions It will serve as an invaluable reference for all those working to conserve and steward forest resources including forest owners and their consultants conservation organizations and agency personnel as well as researchers and students involved with issues of forestry biodiversity land use and conservation

Land Use Changes Involving Forestry in the United States, 1952 to 1997, with Projections to 2050, 2003 Forest Landscapes and Global Change João C. Azevedo, Ajith H. Perera, M. Alice Pinto, 2014-07-11 Climate change urban sprawl abandonment of agriculture intensification of forestry and agriculture changes in energy generation and use expansion of infrastructure networks habitat destruction and degradation and other drivers of change occur at increasing rates They affect patterns and processes in forest landscapes and modify ecosystem services derived from those ecosystems Consequently rapidly changing landscapes present many new challenges to scientists and managers While it is not uncommon to encounter the terms global change and landscape together in the ecological literature a global analyses of drivers of change in forest landscapes and their ecological consequences have not been addressed adequately That is the goal of this volume an exploration of the state of knowledge of global changes in forested landscapes with emphasis on causes and effects and challenges faced by researchers and land managers Initial chapters identify and describe major agents of landscape change climate fire and human activities The next series of chapters address implications of changes on ecosystem services biodiversity conservation and carbon flux A chapter that describes methodologies of detecting and monitoring landscape changes is presented followed by chapter that highlights

the many challenges forest landscape managers face amidst of global change Finally we present a summary and a synthesis of the main points presented in the book Each chapter will contain the individual research experiences of chapter authors augmented by review and synthesis of global scientific literature on relevant topics as well as critical input from multiple peer reviewers

Area Changes in U.S. Forests and Other Major Land Uses, 1982 to 2002, with Projections to 2062 Ralph J. Alig, 2011-05 Describes area changes among major land uses on the U S land base for historical trends from 1982 to 2002 and projections out to 2062 Historically 11 million acres of forest cropland and open space were converted to urban and other developed uses from 1992 to 1997 on non federal land in the contiguous U S The largest percentage increase was in urban use which grew by 10% or 7.3 million acres between 1997 and 2001 Forest land was the largest source of land converted to developed uses such as urbanization Urban and other developed areas are projected to continue to grow substantially in line with a projected U S population increase of more than 120 million people over the next 50 years Figures This is a print on demand publication

Forest Community Connections Ellen M Donoghue, Victoria E Sturtevant, 2010-09-30 The connections between communities and forests are complex and evolving presenting challenges to forest managers researchers and communities themselves Dependency on timber extraction and timber related industries is no longer a universal characteristic of the forest community Remoteness is also a less common feature as technology workforce mobility tourism and amenity migrants increasingly connect rural to urban places Forest Community Connections explores the responses of forest communities to a changing economy changing federal policy and concerns about forest health from both within and outside forest communities Focusing primarily on the United States the book examines the ways that social scientists work with communities their role in facilitating social learning informing policy decisions and contributing to community well being Bringing perspectives from sociology anthropology political science and forestry the authors review a range of management issues including wildfire risk forest restoration labor force capacity and the growing demand for a growing variety of forest goods and services They examine the increasingly diverse aesthetic and cultural values that forest residents attribute to forests the factors that contribute to strong and resilient connections between communities and forests and consider a range of governance structures to positively influence the well being of forest communities and forests including collaboration and community based forestry

Legal, Institutional, and Economic Indicators of Forest Conservation and Sustainable Management, 2005 This review looks at the Nation s legal institutional and economic capacity to promote forest conservation and sustainable resource management It focuses on 20 indicators of Criterion Seven of the so called Montreal Process and involves an extensive search and synthesis of information from a variety of sources It identifies ways to fill information gaps and improve the usefulness of several indicators It concludes that there is substantial information about the application of such capacities although that application is widely dispersed among agencies and private interests which in turn has led to differing interpretations of the indicators Individual chapters identify a need to further develop the conceptual foundation on which many of the indicators are predicated While many uncertainties in the type and accuracy of information are brought to light the review clearly indicates that legal institutional and economic capacities to promote sustainability are large and widely available in both the public and private sectors P vi

Traditional and Local Ecological Knowledge about Forest Biodiversity in the Pacific Northwest Susan Charnley,2008 This paper synthesizes the existing literature about traditional and local ecological knowledge relating to biodiversity in Pacific Northwest forests in order to assess what is needed to apply this knowledge to forest biodiversity conservation efforts We address four topics 1 views and values people have relating to biodiversity 2 the resource use and management practices of local forest users and their effects on biodiversity 3 methods and models for integrating traditional and local ecological knowledge into biodiversity conservation on public and private lands and 4 challenges to applying traditional and local ecological knowledge for biodiversity conservation We focus on the ecological knowledge of three groups who inhabit the region American Indians family forest owners and commercial nontimber forest product NTFP harvesters Integrating traditional and local ecological knowledge into forest biodiversity conservation is most likely to be successful if the knowledge holders are directly engaged with forest managers and western scientists in on the ground projects in which interaction and knowledge sharing occur Three things important to the success of such efforts are understanding the communication styles of knowledge holders establishing a foundation of trust to work from and identifying mutual benefits from knowledge sharing that create an incentive to collaborate for biodiversity conservation Although several promising models exist for how to integrate traditional and local ecological knowledge into forest management a number of social economic and policy constraints have prevented this knowledge from flourishing and being applied These constraints should be addressed alongside any strategy for knowledge integration

Climate Change, Carbon, and Forestry in Northwestern North America David Lawrence Peterson,John L. Innes,Kelly O'Brian,2004 Interactions between forests climatic change and the Earths carbon cycle are complex and represent a challenge for forest managers they are integral to the sustainable management of forests In this volume a number of papers are presented that describe some of the complex relationships between climate the global carbon cycle and forests Research has demonstrated that these are closely connected such that changes in one have an influence not only on the other two but also on their linkages Climatic change represents a considerable threat to forest management in the current static paradigm However carbon sequestration issues offer opportunities for new techniques and strategies and those able to adapt their management to this changing situation are likely to benefit Such changes are already underway in countries such as Australia and Costa Rica but it will probably take much longer for the forestry sector in the Pacific Northwest region of North America encompassing Oregon Washington
