Airlift Short Stories:

Airlift Jan Seale, 1992 The tales in Airlift ask the reader's respect for the small life lived victoriously or in defeat Tightly structured the stories move from a beginning group of aging protagonists in their inexorable certainties to a set featuring midlife yearning mothers falling back to a group of younger women The collection ends with initiation stories evoking the mystery pain and exhilaration of being a child Many of the characters struggle out of simpler agrarian pasts toward the complexities of modernity Some follow peculiar visions and some are children whose innocence is a saving grace to themselves or to surrounding adults Seale's narrative voice is clear and straightforward always engaging never boring
