Biomedicalization of Alcohol Studies Lorraine Midanik, 2019-01-22 Biomedicalization is seen as the natural outgrowth of continued scientific progress a movement towards improving the quality and quantity of life through scientific inquiries using biomedical perspectives and methods This approach carries with it the assumption that with proper risk assessment detection and treatment our lives can be lengthened improved and indeed more fulfilling Yet critics question biomedicalization's ability to deliver There is concern about how biomedicalization can change our traditional concepts of health as we discover more conditions for which we are at risk and health maintenance is seen as the responsibility of the individual The purpose of the book is to describe assess and critique biomedicalization and its influence as a larger social trend on the health field and specifically in the area of alcohol research policy and programs Chapter 1 gives a broad overview of biomedicalization Chapter 2 lays the groundwork

EUROHIS A. Nosikov, Claire Gudex, 2003 The EUROHIS project has focused on the comparability of health surveys and has uncovered some problems that arise when aiming to compare data from different countries Similar problems of cross cultural comparability also arise when comparing data from other sources such as health registers and are just as complex and difficult to tackle One of the main advantages of health surveys however is the relatively low cost and time involved in adapting them according to the needs of health policy makers This work shows that the output from the EUROHIS project provides common instruments for the measurement of eight health indicators The development of these instruments has required careful consideration of relevant common concepts and how these should be defined and operationalized The instruments are freely available for use by all countries with the aim of enhancing national health information systems and facilitating cross national comparisons of health data

Substance Use in a Comparative Perspective Arnošt Veselý, Dagmar Džúrová, 2013-10-01 The book follows two main objectives First it aims at putting together different pieces of evidence on developments of substance use and risk behavior in five post communist countries over time Thus first objective is to build a complex and reliable empirical evidence base for empirical comparison and identify evidence gaps Second we try to analyze and interpret such developments using both quantitative and qualitative analysis and to relate them to the formulated theoretical framework Since available empirical evidence is often far from conclusive the findings presented are sometimes rather exploratory and should be tested by further and more detailed research The book is structured as follows At the beginning we review various factors that have been found to be associated with substance use We try to present them in a complex and systematic way and create a conceptual framework for understanding and explaining substance use in a comparative way Next chapter describes the developments of substance use over time in five countries analyzed This description is based upon publicly available WHO data along with supplementary comments and interpretations by national experts Next chapter is devoted to country profiles of all five countries involved in the project and in depth overviews of developments in their respective substance use situations All reviews are written according to the same structure thus facilitating comparison The last chapter presents a multilevel analysis of substance use in the Czech Republic combining data for individuals and regions
