the system's current and prospective structure and operations as well as the related effects and impacts. The sustainability of the air transport system is considered along a global trajectory of growing effects and diminishing and or stagnating impacts on society and environment under conditions of continuous growth. In doing so, the author examines the situations of users of the system: passengers and freight shippers, air transport operators, airports, air traffic control, and airlines; aerospace manufacturers; local and national communities; policymakers; and the general public. The book possesses the unique and distinctive feature of providing an analysis and assessment of the air transport system's sustainability through elaboration of its technical, technological, operational, economic, social, environmental, and institutional performances and their causality. It is written for advanced graduate and post graduate students, researchers, planners, stakeholders, and policymakers dealing with the various sustainability issues of the contemporary air transport system.

Aircraft Noise Jon M. Woodward, Lisa Lassman Briscoe, Paul H. Dunholter, 2009. This guidebook should be of interest to airport managers and other staff from airports of all sizes who are responsible for responding to neighboring communities regarding aircraft noise issues. It provides guidance on how best to improve communications with the public about issues related to aircraft noise exposure. Specifically, the guidebook presents best practices that characterize an effective communications program and provides basic information about noise and its abatement to assist in responding to public inquiries. It also suggests tools useful to initiate a new or upgrade an existing program of communication with public and private stakeholders about noise issues. An accompanying CD-ROM contains a toolkit with examples of material that has been successfully used to communicate information about noise as well as numerous guidance documents about noise and communications that have seldom been brought together in the same resource.
