Recovery BC DR automation solutions known as GDPS PPRC with HyperSwap and GDPS PPRC HyperSwap Manager are described and shown how they can help an installation move closer to attaining a goal of continuous operation. GDPS PPRC with HyperSwap operates in z OS environments. For z OS installations operating two or more sites in the event of a storage subsystem host network or communications facility failure a switch to processing at an alternate site can be made in almost real time by using GDPS PPRC with HyperSwap. Additionally many Clustered Open Systems that are integrated with IBM Remote Copy technology can be configured to switch to a second site in almost real time. In these situations when a site switch is executed applications that have been cloned at both sites can continue running with minimal impact to the user.

production environment and another LPAR that shares some CPUs but also has a dedicated one for production. Running in IBM z VM mode allows for virtualization of servers and based on z VM shares can prioritize and control their resources. The size of the LPAR or z VM resources depends on the workload and the applications that run that workload. We examine a typical web server environment, Java applications, and describe it by using a database management system such as IBM DB2. Network decisions are examined with regards to VSWITCH, shared Open Systems Adapter (OSA), IBM HiperSockets™, and the HiperPAV or FCP SCSI attachment used with a storage area network (SAN) Volume Controller, along with performance and throughput expectations. The intended audience for this IBM Redbooks publication is IT architects who are responsible for planning production environments and IT specialists who are responsible for implementation of production environments.
