American Labor and the Cold War Robert Cherny,William Issel,Kiernan

Walsh Taylor,2004-07-29 The American labor movement seemed poised on the threshold of unparalleled success at the beginning of the post World War II era Fourteen million strong in 1946 unions represented thirty five percent of non agricultural workers Why then did the gains made between the 1930s and the end of the war produce so few results by the 1960s This collection addresses the history of labor in the postwar years by exploring the impact of the global contest between the United States and the Soviet Union on American workers and labor unions The essays focus on the actual behavior of Americans in their diverse workplaces and communities during the Cold War Where previous scholarship on labor and the Cold War has overemphasized the importance of the Communist Party the automobile industry and Hollywood this book focuses on politically moderate conservative workers and union leaders the medium sized cities that housed the majority of the population and the Roman Catholic Church These are all original essays that draw upon extensive archival research and some upon oral history sources

Local Consequences of the Global Cold War Jeffrey A. Engel, 2007 Up to now the study of cold war history has been fully engaged in stressing the international character and broad themes of the story This volume turns such diplomatic history upside down by studying how actions of international relations affected local popular life Each chapter has its origins in a major international issue and then unfolds the consequences of that issue for some region or city Thus the starting points for the various contributions are great unifying questions regarding postwar occupation militarization industrialization and decolonization But the ending points are small and dispersed such as movies in Japan race relations in the American South forests in East Germany and industry in Novosibirsk Collectively these stories show how the cold war affected every facet of life East and West urban and rural in developed and developing nations in the superpowers and on the periphery of the international system
