Out of Wedlock Larry Wu, Barbara Wolfe, 2001-07-12 Today one third of all American babies are born to unmarried mothers a startling statistic that has prompted national concern about the consequences for women children and society Indeed the debate about welfare and the overhaul of the federal welfare program for single mothers was partially motivated by the desire to reduce out of wedlock births Although the proportion of births to unwed mothers has stopped climbing for the first time since the 1960s it has not decreased and recent trends are too complex to attribute solely to policy interventions What are these trends and how do they differ across groups Are they peculiar to the United States or rooted in more widespread social forces Do children of unmarried mothers face greater life challenges and if so what can be done to help them Out of Wedlock investigates these questions marshalling sociologists demographers and economists to review the state of current research and to provide both empirical information and critical analyses The conflicting data on nonmarital fertility give rise to a host of vexing theoretical methodological and empirical issues some of which researchers are only beginning to address Out of Wedlock breaks important new ground bringing clarity to the data and examining policies that may benefit these particularly vulnerable children
