

Chap 1 Social Psych textbook notes

-Social psychology can be defined as the scientific study of the thoughts, feelings, and behaviours of individuals in different social situations.

-When findings reflect our intuitions and folk wisdom, social psychologists go further, seeking to discover what explains the phenomenon in question.

-Social psychologists study situations in which people influence one another, as well as how we respond to attempts to influence us. Also interested in how we make sense of our world.

-KURT LEWIN: THE FOUNDER OF MODERN PSYCH. studied physics and applied a powerful idea of that discipline to an understanding human social life; He believed that the behaviour of ppl, like the behaviour of objects is always a function of the field of forces surrounding them. (The field of forces in our case is the SITUATION, especially the SOCIAL SITUATION.

-A person's physical and psychological traits are also important determinants of behaviours, but these attributes ALWAYS interact with the situation to produce behaviour.

-People in our environment are main situational influences on our behaviour (including their ACTIONS, WORDS, AND EMOTIONS of

Handbook of Research on Face Processing Andrew W. Young, Hadyn Ellis, 1989 The high degree of scientific interest in face processing is readily understandable since people's faces provide such a wealth of social information Moreover investigations have produced evidence of highly precocious face processing abilities in infants and of neural mechanisms in adults that seem to be differentially involved in face perception Such findings demonstrate that as one might expect the psychological importance of the face has clear biological underpinnings There are also urgent practical reasons for wanting to understand face processing The most extensively investigated of these involve forensic issues Other applications include the development of automated recognition systems for security and other purposes and understanding and rehabilitating disorders and impairments linked to brain injuries and psychiatric conditions Current studies of face processing are grouped in the volume into eleven topic areas For each area the editors approached an acknowledged authority and commissioned a review chapter summarising the findings that have been made These chapters were then circulated to other experts who were asked to write brief commentaries that developed theoretical or empirical points of importance to each area In this way a balanced coverage of each topic is achieved The book begins with a section examining the evidence suggesting that there may be something special about face processing This is followed by consideration of the face as a visual pattern Then there are four sections dealing with major uses of facial information followed by sections discussing the development of face processing abilities and the neural mechanisms involved The last three sections of the book deal with topics for which there are important practical applications for the studies reported
