Statutory and Constitutional Responses to the Supreme Court Decision in Texas V. Johnson United States. Congress. House. Committee on the Judiciary. Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, 1989 Judicial Decision-Making in a Globalised World Elaine Mak, 2014-07-04 Why do judges study legal sources that originated outside their own national legal system and how do they use arguments from these sources in deciding domestic cases Based on interviews with judges this book presents the inside story of how judges engage with international and comparative law in the highest courts of the United Kingdom Canada the United States France and the Netherlands A comparative analysis of the views and experiences of the judges clarifies how the decision making of these Western courts has developed in light of the internationalisation of law and the increased opportunities for transnational judicial communication While the qualitative analysis reveals the motives that judges claim for using foreign law and the influence of globalist and localist approaches to judging the author also finds suggestions of a convergence of practices between the courts that are the subject of this study This empirical analysis is complemented by a constitutional theoretical inquiry into the procedural and substantive factors of legal evolution which enable or constrain the development and possible convergence of highest courts practices The two strands of the analysis are connected in a final contextual reflection on the future development of the role of Western highest courts
