What Distant Deeps David Drake,2010-09-01 NO REST FOR THE WEARY Captain Daniel Leary and his friend the spy Adele Mundy have been in the front lines of Cinnabar s struggle against the totalitarian Alliance Now these galactic superpowers have signed a peace of mutual exhaustion But the jackals are moving in The Republic of Cinnabar was on the verge of collapse under the weight of taxes casualties and war s disruption of trade That the Alliance of Free Stars was in even worse condition helped only because it has made peace possible Years of war have been hard on Daniel and harder still on Adele whose life outside information gathering is a tightrope between despair and deadly violence Their masters in the RCN and the Republic s intelligence service have sent them to the fringes of human space to relax away from danger But the barbarians of the outer reaches have their own plans plans which will bring down both Cinnabar and the Alliance The enemies of peace include traitors giant reptiles and barbarian pirates whose ships can outsail even Daniel Leary s splendid corvette the Princess Cecile Unless Daniel Adele and their unlikely allies succeed galactic civilization will disintegrate into blood and chaos So they will succeed or they ll die trying At the publisher s request this title is sold without DRM Digital Rights Management The Humour of Holland Anonymous, There appears to be an idea abroad to the effect that the Humour of Holland could be most satisfactorily dealt with in a chapter resembling the famous one Of Snakes in Ireland As the average English reader in the most favourable instances knows little more of Dutch literature than a name or two

Rembrandt has introduced us to the poet Vondel and if Southey were not so little read in these days Bilderdijk and Cats would not be so unfamiliar the subject offers a free field to the constructive imagination Yet even so one would think it must be obvious that the nation which has produced a Teniers a Jan Steen and in some of his moods a Rembrandt could not be entirely destitute of humour The estimate of its quality may be a question of taste but though many people practically do adopt this form of logic we cannot make the fact of our not finding it to our liking a ground for denying its existence Of course before determining what the humour of a nation is like we need to know what is that nation's intellectual bent as a whole and what forces have been at work to determine its character On this point we may quote a paragraph or two from a Dutch writer J H Hooijer whom we shall meet again in the course of these pages He is describing a village in North Holland in the heart of the fat meadow lands famous for the production of Dutch cheeses The same village which you find so depressing this November day so damp so clammy so dripping with water makes a very different impression when Spring with full hands has showered her blossom snow over the orchards or in the autumn when the trees are hanging full of golden pears or rosy apples Greener meadow land is nowhere on earth unless it be in the Emerald Isle itself The rich green pastures have velvety lights in the sunshine and the splendid cattle their dappled skins smooth and shining as silk show out to advantage against it colour on colour At such times there is a glow of colour in the whole landscape which strange as it may sound reminds one of the South a glow one might almost think was stolen from the palettes of the Old Masters Every breath you draw is perfumed with new milk and flowers mingled with the salt smell of the sea There is a fulness of outward life a bubbling up and overflowing of vital juices for which they had an eye and a heart those great old realists The man who despises a rich clover pasture speckled here and there with white fleeced sheep who cannot spare a look for the magnificent horned cattle that stand staring at you with dreamy half sad gaze over the fence while Geertje's black eyes flash at you from behind the milking pail well he need not come to North Holland Intellectuals of this sort exclusively devoted to the contemplation of the sublime will find everything ugly in these parts To such an one our Old Masters have nothing to say for him Paul Potter's art is a mere waste of time and many a racy bit of Vondel trivial nonsense Happily the cheery sun is of another mind and his smile falls well pleased on the endless emerald plain He nurses it feeds it warms it he sweetens the blades of grass for the palate of the pampered cow And sometimes just before setting he draws along the horizon with purple finger broad streaks of crimson fire and then the dykes flame out like ruby bands winding over the green velvet robe of the earth and you wish for the power of wielding the brush so as to throw on canvas what one might almost call these brutal effects of colour
