Transport in Plants II U. Lüttge,M.G. Pitman,2012-12-06 In the first part Part A of this volume on transport there was an emphasis on the processes occurring at the membranes bounding the cells It was convenient to distinguish active and passive processes of transport across the membranes and to recognize that certain transport processes may be regulated by internal factors in the cells such as cytoplasmic pH concentrations of ions of malate or of sugar in the vacuoles or the hydrostatic pressure Cells in tissues and organs show the same kinds of properties as individual cells but in addition there can be cell to cell transport related to the organization of the tissue Firstly cells within a tissue are separated from the external solutions by a diffusion path comprising parts of the cell walls and intercellular spaces more generally this extra cytoplasmic part of the tissue has been called the apoplasm A similar term is free space Secondly the anatomy of cells in tissues seems to allow some facilitated local transport between cells in a symplasm Entry into the symplast and subsequent transport in a symplasmic continuum seems to be privileged in that ions may not have to mix with the bulk of the cytoplasm and can pass from cell to cell in particular cytoplasmic structures plasmodesmata In Chara plants this kind of transport is found operating across the multi cellular nodes as the main means of transport between the long internodal cells

Flowering Plants. Monocotyledons Klaus Kubitzki,1998-08-27 When Rolf Dahlgren and I embarked on preparing this book series Rolf took prime responsibility for monocotyledons which had interested him for a long time After finishing his comparative study and family classification of the mono cots he devoted much energy to the acquisition and editing of family treatments for the present series After his untimely death Peter Goldblatt who had worked with him continued to handle further incoming monocot manuscripts until in the early 1990s his other obligations no longer allowed him to continue At that time some 30 manuscripts in various states of perfection had accumulated which seemed to form a solid basis for a speedy completion of the FGVP monocots with the exception of the grasses and orchids which would appear in separate volumes I felt a strong obligation to do everything to help in publishing the manuscripts that had been put into our hands I finally decided to take charge of them personally although during my life as a botanist I had never seriously been interested in mono cots
