of the planet s supreme predators Alongside humans they have the most complex brains to be found in nature But while one of these two species has killed 200 million members of its own kind in the twentieth century alone the other has killed none This is where Jeffrey Masson s fascinating new book begins there is something different about humans Masson has shown us that animals can teach us much about our own emotions about love dogs contentment cats and grief elephants But they have much to teach us about the negative emotions such as anger and aggression as well and in unexpected ways In Beasts he demonstrates that the violence we perceive in the wild is mostly a matter of projection We link the basest human behaviour to animals to beasts and claim the high ground for our species We are least human we think when we succumb to our primitive animal instincts In fact nothing could be further from the truth Animal predators kill to survive but there is nothing in the annals of animal aggression remotely equivalent to the violence mankind has inflicted upon itself Humans and humans in our modern industrialised world in particular are the most violent species in existence We lack what all other animals have a check on aggression that serves the species rather than destroys it And it is here that animals have something vitally important to teach us about ourselves      Breaking Bad Patterns Simon Harper,2024-02-28 Have you ever felt trapped in the relentless grip of negative loops where patterns and habits from the past seem to repeat themselves again and again
