and the places of action of women since the sexed habitus could have marked the values between the genders Both the material culture and the written sources analysed together were essential to prove this problematic since the literature made the gender relations of the emperors and their wives very clear Material culture by demonstrating male power also highlighted female power The greatest importance of this work is to invite the reader to a reflection on the perception of the reality of the present through an analytical approach to the improved conditions of Women s Studies in Antiquity with the aim of generating awareness and coherence in relation to current feminine factors as opposed to the existence of variety and similarity about the women of the past Catalog of Copyright Entries Library of Congress. charities existed to feed children Today 368 million children receive school lunches in 151 countries in programs supported by state and national governments In Feeding the Future Jennifer Geist Rutledge investigates how and why states have assumed responsibility for feeding children chronicling the origins and spread of school lunch programs around the world starting with the adoption of these programs in the United States and some Western European nations and then tracing their growth through the efforts of the World Food Program The primary focus of Feeding the Future is on social policy formation how and why did school lunch programs emerge Given that all countries developed education systems why do some countries have these programs and others do not Rutledge draws on a wealth of information including archival resources interviews with national policymakers in several countries United Nations data and agricultural statistics to underscore the ways in which a combination of ideological and material factors led to the creation of these enduringly popular policies She shows that in many ways these programs emerged largely as an unintended effect of agricultural policy that rewarded farmers for producing surpluses School lunches provided a ready outlet for this surplus She also describes how in each of the cases of school lunch creation policy entrepreneurs motivated by a commitment to alleviate childhood malnutrition harnessed different ideas that were relevant to their state or organization in order to funnel these agricultural surpluses into school lunch programs The public debate over how we feed our children is becoming more and more politically charged Feeding the Future provides vital background to these debates illuminating the history of food policies and the ways our food system is shaped by global social policy
