Fuchs, 1984-01-01 In nineteenth century France parents abandoned their children in overwhelming numbers up to 20 percent of live births in the Parisian area The infants were left at state run homes and were then transferred to rural wet nurses and foster parents Their chances of survival were slim but with alterations in state policy economic and medical development and changing attitudes toward children and the family their chances had significantly improved by the end of the century Rachel Fuchs has drawn on newly discovered archival sources and previously untapped documents of the Paris foundling home in order to depict the actual conditions of abandoned children and to reveal the bureaucratic and political response This study traces the evolution of French social policy from early attempts to limit welfare to later efforts to increase social programs and influence family life Abandoned Children illuminates in detail the family life of nineteenth century French poor It shows how French social policy with respect to abandoned children sought to create an economically useful and politically neutral underclass out of a segment of the population that might otherwise have been an economic drain and a potential political threat Tradition! Vicki L. Lost Culture PAUL KIM, 2014-03-20 Lost Culture takes you deep into a world where water talks rocks have feelings and leaves struggle with the cycle of life It also takes you into imaginary kingdoms where wars are fought outside of human view but where lessons can be learned about finding peace and adapting to new ways Showing compassion to others leaving nature as we find it working to maintain harmonic balance in our universe these are all values that Lost Culture explores in amazingly creative ways These short stories will make people of all ages reflect and hopefully seek to become better people Hop on for the ride to ancient cultures where badgers were once worshipped to the surface of leaves where cultures clash too deep in the forest where wind and lightning interact and see how you are impacted

Mastery Motivation in Early Childhood David J.

Messer,2016-06-10 All children possess a motive to master the various tasks and problems that they face Without mastery motivation it is doubtful whether children would make progress in cognitive social communicative and other domains Although all children possess this motivation it will vary according to inherited dispositions and to environmental experiences This makes mastery motivation a key factor in understanding later developmental and educational achievement Concentrating on pre school children this volume originally published in 1993 brought together current research work and thinking concerned with mastery motivation at the time New ideas are presented about the way mastery is related to other developmental processes such as self concepts and attention There are discussions and findings about innovations in the methods of assessing mastery Another important theme present in this volume is the way in which features of social interaction attachment and the environment influence the development of mastery motivation With a broad range of international contributors this title will still be of interest to developmental psychologists and educationalists and advance students in these fields

Making Social Work News Meryl Aldridge, 2002-09-11 Social work has recently received some dreadful news coverage

but the most extravagant headlines and accusations centre on local authority social work with children Moreover such accusations stem almost exclusively from the national press In Making Social Work News Meryl Aldridge widens the debate of social work and its representation by the news media The book falls into three parts the first providing students and practitioners with a basic understanding of the day to day working and commercial logic of the UK press The second part examines the press coverage of social work itself exploring its considerable variation comparing different news treatments between broadsheet and tabloids and between national and local papers The final part considers whether social work has particular difficulties in defining its goals and lobbying on its own behalf It concludes with some reflection on the importance of doing so now that marketing has become part of the policy process Making Social Work News will be invaluable to all students and lecturers in social work sociology and social policy as well as media and cultural studies It will also be essential reading for all social work professionals particularly those involved in training
