Gospel Women Richard Buckham, 2002-05-15 There have been many studies of the women in the Gospels but this is a new kind of book on the subject Rather than offering a general overview of the Gospel women or focusing on a single theme

Richard Bauckham studies in great depth both the individual women who appear in the Gospels and the specific passages in which they appear. This unique approach reveals that there is much more to be known about such women than previous studies have assumed. Employing historical and literary readings of the biblical texts, Bauckham successfully captures the particularity of each woman he studies. An opening look at the Old Testament book of Ruth introduces the possibilities of reading Scripture from a woman's perspective. Other studies examine the women found in Matthew's genealogies, the prophet Anna, Mary of Clopas, Joanna, Salome, and the women featured in the Gospel resurrection narrative. A number of these women have never been the subject of deep theological enquiry. Unlike most recent books, Bauckham's work is not dominated by a feminist agenda. It does not presume in advance that the Gospel texts support patriarchal oppression, but it does venture some of the new and surprising possibilities that arise when the texts are read from the perspective of their female characters. Astute, sensitive to issues of gender, and written by one of today's leading theologians, Gospel Women will be of interest to a wide range of readers.

Transitions and Transformations in the History of Religions Reynolds, T.H.M. Ludwig, 2018-11-13 Fragile Hopes, Transient Dreams Edna Bell-Pearson, 2006. Alert for danger, Laura Roth stands at the door of her sod house anxiously watching a lone rider cantering toward her across the prairie. Dismounting, he removes his hat and bows slightly. His eyes, in striking contrast to his dark skin, black hair, and beard, are an intense blue. He returns her gaze honestly. She sees nothing to fear. As she dips a cup of water from the barrel by the door and offers it to the weary traveler, Laura never dreams that she and this man would share a mutual secret to the grave. Thus begins the saga of John and Laura Roth and their descendants, their hopes and dreams, trials and tribulations through 110 years on the sweeping Kansas plains. We meet Eva, spoiled and willful, who does what she has to do to survive the depression; Silas, who chooses an unorthodox way to deal with his wife's infidelity; Gerald, who, haunted by a phantom from a boyhood indiscretion, also harbors a lifelong secret. And more. The land, located on the western fringe of The Heartland, one of the richest wheat and gas-producing regions in the world, is a significant protagonist in this Southwest Kansas saga.

Modernist Short Fiction by Women Claire Drewery, 2016-04-15. Taking on the neglected issue of the short story's relationship to literary Modernism, Claire Drewery examines works by Katherine Mansfield, Dorothy Richardson, May Sinclair, and Virginia Woolf. Drewery argues that the short story as a genre is preoccupied with transgressing boundaries and thus offers an ideal platform from which to examine the Modernist fascination with the liminal. Embodying both liberation and restriction, liminal spaces, on the one hand, enable challenges to traditional cultural and personal identities, while on the other hand, they entail the inevitable negative consequences of occupying the position of the outsider: marginality, psychosis, and death. Mansfield, Richardson, Sinclair, and Woolf all exploit this paradox in their short fiction, which typically explores literal and psychological borderline states that are resistant to rational analysis. Thus, their short stories offered these authors an opportunity to represent the borders of unconsciousness and to articulate meaning while also conveying a sense of that which is unsayable. Through their concern with liminality Drewery shows these writers contribute significantly to the Modernist aesthetic that interrogates identity the construction of the self and the relationship between the individual and society

Haram in the Harem Mohanalakshmi Rajakumar, 2009 Haram in the Harem focuses on the differences in nationalist discourse regarding women and the way female writers conceptualized the experience of women in three contexts the middle class Muslim reform movement the Algerian Revolution and the Partition of India During each of these periods the subject of women their behavior bodies and dress were discussed by male scholars politicians and revolutionaries The resonating theme amongst these disparate events is that women were believed to be best protected when they were ensconced within their homes and governed by their families particularly male authority whether they were fathers brothers or husbands The threat to national identity was often linked to the preservation of womanly purity Yet for the writers of this study Ismat Chughtai 1915 1991 Assia Djebar 1936 and Khadija Mastur 1927 1982 the danger to women was not in the public sphere but embedded within a domestic hierarchy enforced by male privilege In their fictional texts each writer shows how women resist subvert and challenge the normative behaviors prescribed in masculine discourse In their writings they highlight the different ways women negotiated private spaces between intersecting masculine hegemonies of power including colonialism and native patriarchy They demonstrate distinct literary viewpoints of nation home and women s experiences at particular historical moments The choice of these various texts reveals how fiction provided a safe space for female writers to contest traditional systems of power Bringing into focus the voices and experiences of women who existed as limited cultural icons in the nationalist discourse is a common theme throughout the selected stories This book showcases the fluidity of literature as a response to the intersections of gender race and nation
