Agricultural Education, a Catalyst for African Development ,1985 Handbook of Agricultural Economics Robert E. Evenson,Prabhu Pingali,2007-06-28 Volume 3 of this series of the Handbooks in Economics follows on from the previous two volumes by focusing on the fundamental concepts of agricultural economics The first part of the volume examines the developments in human resources and technology mastery The second part follows on by considering the processes and impact of invention and innovation in this field The effects of market forces are examined in the third part and the volume concludes by analysing the economics of our changing natural resources including the past effects of climate change Overall this volume forms a comprehensive and accessible survey of the field of agricultural economics and is recommended reading for anyone with an interest either academic or professional in this area Part of the renown Handbooks in Economics series Contributors are leaders of their areas International in scope and comprehensive in coverage Successful Development in Africa Rundheersing Bheenick,1989 This book consists of seven case studies that differ in various dimensions as well as in their country settings Four of the case studies analyze the following development projects or programs a a project for controlling the runoff of rainfall in semi arid areas of Burkina Faso b a multicountry program to control the serious endemic disease of river blindness onchocerciasis in West Africa c a program to organize gravity fed piped water systems for rural villages in Malawi and d a program to develop horticultural commodities for export in Kenya The other three case studies analyze the following macroeconomic programs or policies e a trade strategy based on the creation of an export processing zone in Mauritius f a balance of payments and structural adjustment program in Ghana and g macroeconomic management of commodity booms in Botswana

The Quality of Education and Economic Development Stephen P. Heyneman, Daphne Siev White, 1986 Although for many years the emphasis in education was on growth and on the need to provide more classrooms increasing attention has shifted recently toward the quality and value of the education being received This document contains two studies related to the subject of educational quality The first paper reviews the relevant research on this question and reveals that school quality has substantially greater effects on changes in students cognitive and behavioral outcomes in developing than in advanced countries It also finds that school quality seems to affect the lifetime earnings of all students regardless of the level of development of their countries The author concludes that in the long run the quality of schooling provided may be more important for the future economic prospects of developing nations than expanded access to poor quality education Nevertheless knowing that educational quality has an economic effect on development does not determine whether investments in educational quality will be successfully implemented This is the subject of the second study The author argues that educational systems proceed through a series of stages during which they are able to implement increasingly more complex educational investments

Rural Extension Services Jock R. Anderson, Gershon Feder, 2003 Anderson and Feder analyze the considerations that lead policymakers to undertake extension investments as a key public responsibility as well as the complex set of factors and intra agency incentives that explain why different extension systems performance vary The authors provide a conceptual framework outlining farmers demand for information the welfare economic characterizations of extension services and the organizational and political attributes that govern the performance of extension systems They use the conceptual framework to examine several extension modalities and to analyze their likely and actual effectiveness Specifically the modalities reviewed include training and visit extension decentralized systems fee for service and privatized extension and farmer field schools The authors also discuss methodological issues pertaining to the assessment of extension outcomes and review the empirical literature on extension impact They emphasize the efficiency gains that can come from locally decentralized delivery systems with incentive structures based largely on private provision that in most poorer countries is still publicly funded In wealthier countries and for particular higher income farmer groups extension systems will likely evolve into fee for service organizations This paper a joint product of the Agriculture and Rural Development Department and Rural Development Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the Bank to study the opportunities and challenges facing agricultural extension
