Death at the Point Andrew Dutfield, 2023-11-14 Some see outsized beauty where others only see bleakness like the sweeping landscape of Hecla Island situated two hours north of Winnipeg Canada Death at the Point is largely set in this real life area with Icelandic roots that originally lured Henry Trevellyn and his wife Julia to its rocky shores as a weekend respite Originally an emigre from London and now a retired member of the Winnipeg Police Service's Major Crimes Unit he alternates his time between volunteering in Winnipeg and relaxing in the unspoiled tranquility of island life He finds himself longing to spend more time at the couple's cottage on Hecla kayaking its lonely shores and wandering its lush forest trails with his Labrador retriever Skip When a tall red headed stranger appears on the island and soon after a body is found Henry's unyielding curiosity and investigative skills kick back into gear Both the close knit community and the solitude Henry has come to enjoy has been shattered The Focussing on interracial intimacy between Ngāi Tahu and Pākehā settlers, it explores how intermarriage played a key role in shaping colonial encounters. As Ngāi Tahu sought to fight the alienation of their land and protect their natural resources, marriage practices and kinship networks became an increasingly important way to control interaction with Pākehā. The book also explores the contradictions and ambiguities of mixed-descent lives, offering new insights into New Zealand's colonial past.
