The search for general laws and regularities in Translation Studies gained new momentum in the 1990s when Baker 1993 promoted the use of large electronic corpora as research tools for exploring the linguistic features that render the language of translation different from the language of non translated texts By comparing a corpus of translated and non translated English texts Baker and her research team put forward the hypothesis that translated texts are characterized by some universal features namely simplification explicitation normalization and levelling out The purpose of this study is to test whether simplification explicitation and normalization apply to Italian translations of children s books In order to achieve this aim a comparable corpus of translated and non translated works of classic fiction for children has been collected and analysed using Corpus Linguistics tools and methodologies The results show that in the translational subcorpus simplification explicitation and normalization processes do not prevail over the non translational one Therefore it is suggested that the status of translated children s literature in the Italian literary polysystem Even Zohar 1979 1990 and from a general viewpoint all the cultural historical and social conditions that influence translators activities determine translation choices that can also tend towards processes different from those proposed by Baker      e-World 8 Anshu Kumar, Shweta Malik,

Towards a Theory of Epistemically Significant Perception Nadja El Kassar, 2015-09-25 How does perceptual experience make us knowledgeable about the world In this book Nadja El Kassar argues that an informed answer requires a novel theory of perception perceptual experience involves conceptual capacities and consists in a relation between a perceiver and the world Contemporary theories of perception disagree about the role of content and conceptual capacities in perceptual experience In her analysis El Kassar scrutinizes the arguments of conceptualist and relationist theories thereby exposing their limitations for explaining the epistemic role of perceptual experience Against this background she develops her novel theory of epistemically significant perception Her theory improves on current accounts by encompassing both the epistemic role of perceptual experiences and its perceptual character Central claims of her theory receive additional support from work in vision science making this book an original contribution to the philosophy of perception

Nikolai Petrovich Dubinin, 1962 Habitability and Cosmic Catastrophes Arnold Hanslmeier, 2008-11-14 The search for life in the universe is one of the most challenging topics of science It is not a modern topic at all since more than 100 years ago it was speculated that on the Moon there are oceans and seas on Venus there are swamps and also Mars is inhabited However now we have the scientific background and the scientific tools to answer this question and it is also certain that the answer would have deep implications for our culture philosophy and religions If we find that life has developed on other planets or satellites of giant planets then this would be the final breakdown of our central position in the universe But is life a widespread phenomenon How vulnerable is it to changing conditions and even catastrophic events These topics will be discussed in this book If life is in the extreme case a unique phenomenon found only on planet Earth which seems to be highly unrealistic then also it is important to discuss how it is adaptable to changing external conditions Can we survive a cosmic catastrophe How do these catastrophes change habitability Which forms of life are more vulnerable It was mentioned that now science has made great progress to answer such questions Let us give some examples In modern biology in connection with organic chemistry the origin of life is studied
