Transformative Experience Laurie Ann Paul, 2014 As we live our lives we repeatedly make decisions that shape our future circumstances and affect the sort of person we will be When choosing whether to start a family or deciding on a career we often think we can assess the options by imagining what different experiences would be like for us L A Paul argues that for choices involving dramatically new experiences we are confronted by the brute fact that we can know very little about our subjective futures This has serious implications for our decisions If we make life choices in the way we naturally and intuitively want to by considering what we care about and what our future selves will be like if we choose to have the experience we only learn what we really need to know after we have already committed ourselves If we try to escape the dilemma by avoiding an experience we have still made a choice Choosing rationally then may require us to regard big life decisions as choices to make discoveries small and large about the intrinsic nature of experience and to recognize that part of the value of living authentically is to experience one s life and preferences in whatever way they may evolve in the wake of the choices one makes Using classic philosophical examples about the nature of consciousness and drawing on recent work in normative decision theory cognitive science epistemology and the philosophy of mind Paul develops a rigorous account of transformative experience that sheds light on how we should understand real read the book and the book is reading us In his later novels Charles Dickens uses the interaction between characters and their audiences within the fiction to dramatise his growing understanding of the pivotal role of spectatorship and choice in a more democratic society Egotists of all stripes intent on bending the world to their singular will would appropriate the power of spectatorship by taking command of the detachment necessary for choice Dickens's pluralistic art of sameness and difference redefines that detachment and liberates choice both inside and outside the novels for the relationship between characters and their audiences within the narratives actually inscribes our own relationship with them in the performance of reading a reflective doubling of the fiction upon the reader across time with moral consequences for our spectatorship of our own lives
