Of Life:

The Nature of Order, Book One: The Phenomenon of Life Christopher Alexander, 2020-03-30 Christopher Alexander's series of ground breaking books including A Pattern Language and The Timeless Way of Building have pointed to fundamental truths of the way we build revealing what gives life and beauty and true functionality to our buildings and towns. Now in The Nature of Order Alexander explores the properties of life itself highlighting a set of well defined structures present in all order and in all life from micro organisms and mountain ranges to good houses and vibrant communities. In The Phenomenon of Life the first volume in this four volume masterwork Alexander proposes a scientific view of the world in which all space matter has perceptible degrees of life and sets this understanding of order as an intellectual basis for a new architecture. With this view as a foundation we can ask precise questions about what must be done to create more life in our world whether in a room a humble doorknob a neighbourhood or even in a vast region. He introduces the concept of living structure basing it upon his theories of centers and of wholeness and defines the fifteen properties from which according to his observations all wholeness is built. Alexander argues that living structure is at once both personal and structural. Taken as a whole the four books create a sweeping new conception of the nature of things which is both objective and structural hence part of science and also personal in that it shows how and why things have the power to touch the human heart. A step has been taken through which these two domains the domain of geometrical structure and the feeling it creates kept separate during four centuries of scientific thought from 1600 to 2000 have finally been united.

Handbook of Environmental Psychology and Quality of Life Research Ghazlane Fleury-Bahi, Enric Pol, Oscar Navarro, 2016-08-12 This Handbook presents a broad overview of the current research carried out in environmental psychology which puts into perspective quality of life and relationships with living spaces and shows how this original analytical framework can be used to understand different environmental and societal issues. Adopting an original approach this Handbook focuses on the links with other specialties in psychology especially social and health psychology together with other disciplines such as geography architecture sociology anthropology urbanism and engineering. Faced with the problems of society which involve the quality of life of individuals and communities it is fundamental to consider the relationships an individual has with his different living spaces. This issue of the links between quality of life and environment is becoming increasingly significant with at a local level problems resulting from different types of annoyances such as pollution and noise while at a global level there is the central question of climate change with its harmful consequences for humans and the planet. How can the impact on well being of environmental nuisances and threats for example natural risks pollution and noise be reduced? How can the quality of life within daily living spaces home cities work environments be improved? Why is it important to understand the psychological issues of our relationship with the global environment climatic warming ecological behaviours? This Handbook is intended not only for students of various disciplines geography architecture psychology town planning etc but also for social decision makers and players who will find in it both theoretical and methodological perspectives so that psychological and environmental dimensions can be better taken into account in their working practices

The Conceptual frameworks on Quality of Life Dr. Kasturi Shukla, 2022-01-18 Anything that has to do with people anywhere across the globe has surely something to do with their Quality of Life. The concept has been discussed and finds reference right from ancient literature dating back to early Greek philosophers like Socrates 469 399 BC his student Plato 427 428 348 347 BC and Aristotle 384 322 BC and stays on the radar of researchers and policy makers until today. Aristotle had written about the nature of happiness and what people require in order to have a good life. The concept of QoL still holds a strong place in psychological studies, social research as well as policy making because the various national and international bodies like World Health Organization, United Nations and many others have a strong focus on improving the QoL of the people. The book is a comprehensive compilation of the large number of definitions of QoL, multiple underlying theories, various concepts, derivative models, how QoL is essentially linked with the UN's SDGs and the crucial global rankings used for international comparative analysis of QoL. As the world is changing fast while recovering from the Covid 19 pandemic, there are many changing trends that have an integral role in QoL assessments. The book attempts to cover almost all of this in lucid and comprehensible language.

The Purpose of Life & Other Teachings By Ven. K Sri Dhammananda, 2007-05-01 Is there a purpose for life? What is the purpose of life? What, or where, or when? Out of space came universe, from sun came earth, from earth came life. But as to purpose, whose or whence? Why? This book gives very clear, practical and direct to the point advice to those who seek to achieve an understanding of their life on earth and how to lead a noble life amidst the confusion, murkiness, materialism and strong craving that this age heralds. End-of-Life Care and Pragmatic Decision Making D. Micah Hester, 2009-11-30 Every one of us will die and the processes we go through will be our own, unique to our own experiences and life stories. End of Life Care and Pragmatic Decision Making provides a pragmatic philosophical framework based on a radically empirical attitude toward life and death. D. Micah Hester takes seriously the complexities of experiences and argues that when making end of life decisions, healthcare providers ought to pay close attention to the narratives of patients and the communities they inhabit so that their dying processes embody their life stories. He discusses three types of end of life patient populations: adults with decision making capacity, adults without capacity, and children, with a strong focus on infants to show the implications of pragmatic empiricism and the scope of decision making at the end of life for different types of patients.

Statistical Methods for Quality of Life Studies Mounir Mesbah, Bernard F. Cole, Mei-Ling Ting Lee, 2013-06-29 On October 16 and 17, 2000, we hosted an international workshop entitled Statistical Design, Measurement and Analysis of Health Related Quality of Life. The workshop was held in the beautiful city of Arradon, South Brittany, France, with the main goal of fostering an interdisciplinary forum for discussion of theoretical and applied statistical issues arising in studies of health related quality of life. HRQoL Included were biostatisticians psychometricians and public health professionals e g physicians sociologists psychologists active in the study of HRQoL In assembling this volume we invited each conference participant to contribute a paper based on his or her presentation and the ensuing and very interesting discussions that took place in Arradon All papers were peer reviewed by anonymous reviewers and revised before final editing and acceptance Although this process was quite time consuming we believe that it greatly improved the volume as a whole making this book a valuable contribution to the field of HRQoL research The volume presents a broad spectrum of papers presented at the Workshop and thus illustrates the range of current research related to the theory methods and applications of HRQoL as well as the interdisciplinary nature of this work Following an introduction written by Sir David Cox it includes 27 articles organized into the following chapters themselves in this novel yearbook Longevity and Quality of Life Robert N. Butler, Claude Jasmin, 2012-12-06 Nations around the world are experiencing a spectacular increase in longevity Society as a whole is being challenged by issues arising from this revolution in longevity Although the specter of the loneliness and existential suffering of older citizens is such that some people under the age of 65 find it difficult to conceive of a long term future persons over 85 have proven that aging does not necessarily preclude a healthy and productive life Extraordinary progress in both curative and preventive medicine justifies optimism about the quality of life and state of well being that can be enjoyed even in great old age We should look to professionals in diverse fields to develop creative solutions to the inevitable issues that will arise with aging Governments must prepare for the future health of their citizens by making long term investments to educate all sectors of society in the value of good nutrition exercise and lifestyles that enhance well being throughout life Also governments should realize that the main cause of health care expenditure is serious illness which occurs in persons of all ages and not predominantly in older people Early detection can help save lives as well Health and longevity of life will ultimately end as a political issue What is needed is long term government investments necessary for a viable health policy The question arises will world leaders be able to commit to such a policy Two major socioeconomic phenomena may have a regulating effect on this issue The first is the emergence of pressure groups that have come into being in response to a particular health issue such as AIDS The second is the emergence of ethics committees in developed nations that deal solely with health issues
